HAMILTON,

WITH THE PARISHES OF BOTHWELL, DALZIEL, AND DALSERF, AND THE VILLAGES OF MOTHERWELL, BELLSHILL, CARFIN, NEWARTHILL, LARKHALL, AND UDDINGSTONE.

HAMILTON is an ancient town, royal burgh, and the capital of the parish of its name and of the middle ward of the county; 37 miles w. by s. from Edinburgh, 10½ s. s. e. from Glasgow, 15 n. w. from Lanark, 8 s. from Airdrie, and 7 n. from Strathaven; it occupies an eligible site, on the roads betwixt Glasgow and Carlisle, and Edinburgh and Ayr, and a pleasant situation in a highly cultivated country, washed by the Clyde and the Avon. The town lies along the base of a rising ground, extending nearly a mile in length and consists of several streets of substantial well-built houses—not very regularly disposed, but handsome in appearance; and the whole town has an air of comfort, respectability, and activity. Of late years many improvements have been effected in the town and neighbourhood, and it is rapidly increasing in population and importance. A new line of street has been opened through the town, forming part of the London road; a bridge, called Cadzow bridge, has been thrown across the ravine, thereby avoiding the lower part of the old town; and a railway has been laid down from Glasgow, which has proved the means of opening the vast mineral field in the vicinity of Hamilton. Among the public buildings will be recognised the handsome town-hall, in form of a Roman temple, with appropriate offices and a gaol; a new church of the establishment, dedicated to St. John; the British Linen Company's bank, a branch of the Bank of Scotland and, besides several rows of beautiful villas. The town is lighted with gas by a company, and works have been constructed for supplying the inhabitants with water. The moderate distance of Hamilton from Glasgow has facilitated the introduction of weaving cotton goods here to a large amount; the lace trade is carried on to a considerable extent, and the prosperity of this business has been greatly augmented by improvements, although of late years the remuneration for this branch of trade has been considerably reduced. There are five banking establishments prosperously settled in this burgh, namely branches respectively of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Bank of Scotland, the City of Glasgow Bank, the British Linen Company, and the Commercial Bank of Scotland.

In the fifteenth century Lord Hamilton, erected the town into a burgh of barony; Queen Mary created it into a royal burgh in 1548, but after the reformation, the rights and privileges thus acquired from the crown were resigned into the hands of William Duke of Hamilton, who in 1670 restored to the community its former franchises, and erected it into a burgh of regality dependent on him and his successors. The government of the burgh is vested in a provost, three baillies, and nine councillors; and in connection with Lanark, Airdrie, Falkirk and Linlithgow, it sends a representative to parliament, the present member is James Merry, Esq. The justices of peace hold regular courts for the trial of minor offences.

The places of worship are churches of the Establishment, Free churches, meeting-houses of the United Presbyterian church, and Independent chapels. The old parish church was made collegiate in 1451, by Sir James Hamilton, for a provost and prebendary, it has always been the place of sepulture of that family. The great objects of attraction in this part of Lanarkshire, are the Palace (as it is called) of the Duke of Hamilton, and its surrounding pleasure grounds: the building forms three sides of a quadrangle; the rooms are spacious, particularly the picture gallery, which contains the finest collection in Scotland. In the middle of the great park, one mile from the town, on a rock overhanging the Avon, stand the ruins of Cadzow Castle, the ancient manor house; the park is well stocked with deer, and bears a number of stately oaks. Amongst the charitable institutions of Hamilton are two hospitals, for the reception of a certain number of old men—the one endowed by the noble family above mentioned, the other by a Mr. James Robertson; there are likewise two orphan schools, some friendly societies, and a masonic lodge. In the vicinity, to the west of the town, on the road to Bothwell, are spacious and handsome barracks; and on the banks of the Clyde is an extensive racecourse, on which horse races occasionally take place, and the meetings are noted as among the best attended in Scotland. The weekly market is held on Friday; and the fairs on the second Thursday in February, the first Friday after the 15th of May, the last Thursday in June, and the second Thursday in November (old style). The hiring and cattle markets are held on the third Friday in April, and the third Friday in October; and the annual cattle show about the beginning of June.

BOTHWELL is an ancient village in the parish of its name, situate on the road from Glasgow to Hamilton, between eight and nine miles from the former and between two and three from the latter town. The parish is of an oval form, about eight miles and a half long by four broad; the great roads from Edinburgh to Glasgow, and from Glasgow to Carlisle, and the Caledonian Railway pass through it; and, besides the river Clyde, it is intersected by the two Calders, which are beautifully skirted with wood. Throughout the parish coal is found in abundance, and several collieries are in full operation. Near the village, towards the west, on the side of the Clyde, is the modern mansion of the late Lord Douglas, now in possession of the Countess of Home, standing in the midst of shrubberies and plantations; contiguous to which, on an eminence is the magnificent ruin of Bothwell Castle, once a most important Scottish fortress, much admired by all visiters. The road to Hamilton is carried over the Clyde by means of Bothwell bridge, a name famous in Scottish history from this being the spot on which the Duke of Montrose routed a formidable army of covenanters on the 22d of June, 1679. The ancient church of Bothwell was founded by Archibald, 'the Grim' Earl of Douglas, in 1398, with liberal endowments for a provost and eight prebendaries. An elegant church has been erected by the heritors of the parish; it is in the Gothic style, and exhibits a fine appearance as seen on approaching the village from Hamilton.

The parish of DALZIEL lies on the north bank of the Clyde; and the roads from Lanark to Glasgow, and from Edinburgh to Hamilton, pass through it. Near the centre of the parish, at about two miles from Hamilton, stands the church, in a conspicuous situation on the summit of a ridge; and on the picturesque banks of a small brook is seen the mansion-house of Dalziel, attached to the old tower of the manor—a high Gothic edifice, with battlements and loop-holes; it is a structure of considerable antiquity, and has been kept in repair to the present day solely on that account. This parish abounds in coal of superior quality for the transit of which the Caledonian Railway affords great facility.

DALSERF is a parish in the middle ward of Lanarkshire, on the west bank of the Clyde, its greatest length is 6½ miles, and its greatest breadth 4½. The soil is generally fertile and well-cultivated, and coal is found in abundance. The only village deserving notice in the parish is LARKHALL, three miles from Hamilton, on the great road from Glasgow to Carlisle. In this village over 600 looms are employed in the weaving of fancy fabrics for Glasgow houses; and the large bleach works of Messrs. Robertson and Miller are situated here, giving employment to a large number of hands; altogether the parish has every appearance of prosperity; it contains a population considerably over 4,000.

Between seven and eight miles from Bothwell, in a south easterly direction is the considerable village of BELLSHILL, close to which is situate the works of the Moss-end Malleable Iron Company, employing numerous hands.

About three miles from Bothwell, adjoining the parish of Dalziel is MOTHERWELL, latterly very much increased, both in importance and extent, chiefly owing to the great number employed by the Glasgow Malleable Iron Company, situated on that border of the village. At this place there is a junction station on the Caledonian Railway. One mile further east is the village of CARFIN, and about two miles from thence and in the same direction is the village of NEWHARTHILL, both are pretty large in extent, and a great number of the inhabitants find employment in the adjoining coal fields.

UDDINGSTONE is a thriving village in the parish of Bothwell, four miles north west from Hamilton. The road from Glasgow to Carlisle passes through the village, and it has a station on the Caledonian Railway. There are two iron foundries and three establishments for the manufacture of agricultural implements, of which that of Messrs. J. Wilkie and Co. stands pre-eminent. The village is lighted with gas, and presents an appearance of neatness and good order.

KILBRIDE (EAST) AND CARMUNNOCK.

KILBRIDE is a market village and burgh of barony in the parish of its name, situate on the road from Glasgow to Muirkirk, 8 miles S. from the former city, the like distance N. from Strathaven, between 6 and 7 S.W. from Hamilton, and 45 W. by S. from Edinburgh. The parish, which comprehends the abrogated one of Torrance, contains some extensive lime-works, and coal also lies beneath the surface. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in weaving for the Glasgow manufacturers. The places of worship are the parish kirk, the United Presbyterian chapel, and the Free kirk. Kilbride has produced several eminent men, among whom are found Dr. Wm. Hunter, and his brother, Mr. John Hunter, the celebrated anatomist and physiologist. There are two good schools, the parochial school in KILBRIDE, and one at MAXWELTON, a short distance from the town, the latter being endowed by Sir William Alexander Maxwell, Bart., of Calderwood Castle. A market is entitled to be holden here on Tuesday, and four annual fairs; only two of the latter are now observed—these take place in June and November. There were also large sheep markets held here in May and June; they have been discontinued, with the exception of one on the last Friday in May (old style), which is still well attended; on that day, likewise, the farmers' society exhibit prize cattle.

The parish of CARMUNNOCK lies on the north-western confines of the county, on the east bank of the White Cart river, having Kilbride on the south, and Cambuslang on the east; it is four miles in length by three in breadth. The ground is partly arable and partly pastoral, the banks of the Cart presenting some fine woodland scenery. On the estate of Castlemilk (the proprietors of which are supposed to be lineal descendants of the royal house of Stuart) are the remains of a Roman military road; and many tumuli have been met with, which when opened, have always been found to contain human bones and instruments of war. In the house of Castlemilk, which is noted for its fine situation, Mary, Queen of Scots is said to have lodged the night before the battle of Langside.

LANARK,

WITH NEW LANARK, KIRKFIELD-BANK AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LANARK is a royal burgh, market town, the capital of the county and parish to which it gives name, and the seat of a presbytery; 32 miles S. W. from Edinburgh, 25 S.E. from Glasgow, 15 S.E. from Hamilton, and 11 N.W. from Biggar, situate on the main road from Stirling to Carlisle, and one mile above the left or east bank of the Clyde. It is a place of great antiquity, and is the spot where the first assembly of parliament mentioned in the history of Scotland was convened by Kenneth III. in the year 978. It is said to have received its original charter from Alexander I, and it is certain that it was a royal town as early at least as Malcolm IV. Many of the ancient Scottish kings made Lanark (or Lanerk) their residence; and at one period there stood a castle on an apparently artificial mound at the bottom of the present Castlegate, the summit of which elevation is now converted into a bowling-green. Lanark possesses interest as having been the scene of the first decisive military enterprise of the celebrated Sir William Wallace—that patriot having here commenced his glorious (though personally unfortunate) career, by the defeat and death of William de Heselrig, the English sheriff of Lanarkshire, in 1293. We are told that Wallace having married a lady of the name of Braidfoot, the heiress of Lamington, resided with her privately at Lanark—that while there, he, with a few friends, had a quarrel and conflict with some officers of the English garrison, the party of Wallace being overpowered by numbers, he made his escape to Cartland Craig—on which the sheriff seized on his wife and put her to death. To revenge this barbarous atrocity, Wallace and his friends attacked the sheriff in the night, and massacred him with two hundred and forty Englishmen. Bruce finally recovered Lanark from the English in 1310. The present town is principally composed of one line of streets, descending from east to west, bearing the respective names of High-street, Bloomgate, and Westport; besides these, there are smaller streets diverging, and several lanes and closes. The main line contains many good stone buildings of respectable appearance, and well-furnished shops; the whole being suitably lighted with gas, supplied by a company, whose works were erected in 1832, at Steel's Cross. The general occupation of the inhabitants is hand-loom weaving for the Glasgow manufacturers; nailmaking is carried on to some extent. There is also a brewery, three banks, and several good inns, new barracks have also been erected. Behind the Clydesdale Hotel are the Assembly Rooms erected in 1827, on the site of which stood an ancient monastery of Franciscans. The County Buildings, in Hope-street, are a great ornament to that part of the town; they are in the Grecian style of architecture, with a noble front of freestone, and comprise commodious court-rooms and appropriate offices; the gaol is situated at the rear of the court house; the whole of this handsome and useful pile was completed in 1836, at an expense of upwards of £5,000. As a royal burgh, whose charters were finally confirmed by Charles I, in 1632, it is governed by a provost, two baillies, a dean of guild, a town-clerk, a treasurer, and twelve councillors; it unites with Hamilton, Linlithgow, Airdrie and Falkirk in returning one member to parliament. The sheriff's court is held in the County Buildings every Tuesday during session; a justice of peace court on the first and third Monday of each month; one for the burgh every Friday, and a general county meeting takes place annually in the same edifice on the last day of April. The places of worship consist of the parish church, which stands in the centre of the main street, a Church of England in Hope-street, a Quoad Sacra Free church, two United Presbyterian and a Congregational church, and a Roman Catholic chapel. In a niche over the eastern door of the church is placed a colossal statue of Wallace, executed and presented to the town by Forrest, a self-taught genius. The remains of the old parish church, which are situate at the distance of a quarter of a mile eastward of the town have been deserted for more than seventy years; tradition asserts that in this structure, at public worship, the heroic

Wallace first seen his subsequently murdered wife. In the cemetery which surrounds the church was interred William Lithgow, a celebrated and eccentric traveller of the reign of James VI; after his peregrination through a great portion of Europe and Asia, he came home miserably mutilated and disfigured by the inquisition, and settled in his native parish till his death. The principal educational institutions are the grammar school supported by the corporation; and Wilson's free school, endowed by a lady of that name, in the year 1818, for the education of twenty-five boys, and the like number of girls. Lanark has ever possessed considerable attractions to the visitor and the tourist, from the beautiful undulating scenery and the romantic grounds at Bonnington, and the falls of Clyde. The falls of Corra, where the water takes three distinct leaps, making altogether eighty-four feet. A little further is Bonnington fall. About a mile to the north of the tower is a very old arch, supposed to have been erected either by the Picts or Romans. A fine view of Cartlane bridge, erected in 1822, is obtained here, and Cartlane Craigs, a deep and rugged chasm, evidently formed by a convulsion of nature, will be an interesting object to the visitor. The neighbourhood of Lanark is adorned with many mansions of the nobility and gentry; and at Lee House, the seat of the Lockhart family, is to be seen the curious stone called the 'Lee Penny,' which is said to have suggested to the late Sir Walter Scott the idea of his celebrated novel the 'Talisman.' Horse races are now held on an extensive and excellent course, about a mile and a half east of the town. In the vicinity is a large loch, which, until the last few years, has been quite disregarded, but by the spirit and enterprise of a few individuals its margins have been embanked and planted, and it forms an attractive and delightful promenade, and is much frequented by the inhabitants. The market day is Tuesday; fairs, the last Wednesdays of April, May and July (old style), the Thursday after the second Monday of October, and the first Wednesday of November (old style), all for cattle and horses, and lambs in the season.

New Lanark is a very neat, regular, and well-built village, about one mile south from Lanark, on the same side of the Clyde as that town. It was founded by Mr. Dale in 1785, that gentleman having erected the first of the present long range of mills, and constructed a subterraneous acqueduct, about one hundred yards in length, through the solid rock—by which means he brought the waters of the Clyde on to the sloping plain on which the mills and the village now stand. The 'Institution,' as it is called, is the school for the whole village, where the proprietors compel the inhabitants to send all their children from the age of three to the age of thirteen. The late great (and by many considered mistaken) philanthropist, Owen, was long a principal proprietor of these extensive mills; he made great efforts and sacrifices for the good of his work-people, and it is to him that the inhabitants owe their present educational institution, which, in effects and results as regards the morals of this community, have worked admirably. The factories of New Lanark, and its instructive establishment, are now objects of curiosity to all tourists; and indeed strangers would deprive themselves of much gratification if they left this part of the country without paying them a visit.

LEADHILLS, CRAWFORD, AND CRAWFORD-JOHN.

LEADHILLS is a village in the parish of Crawford, 46 miles S.W. from Edinburgh, 44 S. from Glasgow, 15 E. from Douglas Mill, and 16 N. from Thornhill, situate in the alpine region, amidst a wilderness of dismal heathy mountains, on the road from Glasgow to Dumfries. It derives its name from being the residence of workmen employed in the lead mines, which are the most valuable of any in Scotland, and perhaps in Britain: the mines, which are farmed by a company from the Earl of Hopetoun, have produced in some years 18,000 bars, at nine stone avoirdupois the bar, in the year 1809, 25,200 bars were produced, which, at £32 per ton (the then price), amounted to £45,360; the ore dug from these mines affords a very liberal proportion of silver. Gold was found in the sand of the mountains at an early period: during the reign of James VI. of Scotland, Sir Bevis Bulmer, a German, by order of Queen Elizabeth, was sent to collect gold dust in the waters of Elvan and Glengonar, with which they were said to abound; he had a house at Wanlockhead, where he deposited the fruits of his labour: the attempt was revived by the late Lord Hopetoun, but soon discontinued, as the product was inadequate to the expense. It was at Leadhills that Allan Ramsay, the poet, was born and spent his earliest years. Fairs are held on the second Friday of June and the last Friday of October.

CRAWFORD is a small village in the parish of its name, eight miles from Leadhills, situate on the main road between Glasgow and Carlisle; it contains a good inn and the parish church, which latter was enlarged and improved in 1836. The name is said to be derived from the British compound Craw-ford, signifying the 'passage' or the 'road of blood;' an appellation supposed to have been obtained from this locality having been the scene of some bloody contest between the people of the country and their Roman invaders.

CRAWFORD-JOHN is a parish in the upper part of Clydesdale, contiguous to the foregoing parish, and on the east of Muirkirk and Douglas. The small river named Duneaton water takes its rise at the head of this district. On the top of Netherton Hill are the vestiges of an extensive encampment, and in other parts of the parish are the ruins of two ancient castles. The village, which is insignificant, is situate about a mile and a half south-west of the mail road, and about eight miles north from Leadhills; with the exception of the parish church and school, it contains nothing worthy of notice.

LESMAHAGO,

WITH ABBEY GREEN, KIRKFIELD-BANK, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LESMAHAGO, more properly called ABBEY GREEN, is situated on the river Nethan, one of the tributaries of the Clyde, and in the upper ward of Lanarkshire. It is a beautiful village, in almost the centre of the parish of its name, 38 miles W. from Edinburgh, 23 S. E. from Glasgow, and 6 S.W. from Lanark. It takes its name from the old abbey, taken down at the beginning of the present century, and an established church erected on its site by the heritors of the parish in 1803. The old abbey was founded by David I, in the year 1140, and dedicated by him to St. Machute. An annual fair was formerly held on the 15th November, at Abbey Green, entitled St. Machute's fair, but this is now discontinued. The parish is very extensive, being twelve miles square, and containing a population of nearly 9,000: it is one of the richest in minerals in Scotland, the gas coal at AUCHENHEATH, which has been worked for upwards of 100 years, is well known, and shipped in large quantities. Ironstone, limestone, and freestone are also worked in abundance in the parish and its neighbourhood. In obtaining and working these minerals a considerable number of the inhabitants find employment—whilst many others are occupied in weaving for the Glasgow manufacturers. The transit of the minerals is facilitated by means of a railway opened about two years ago for mineral traffic only; it passes through, or near most of the mines, and joins the Caledonian line at Motherwell. The City of Glargow Bank, and the Royal Bank of Scotland, have branches here. The village is now well lighted with gas. Besides the parish church there is a Free church, an United and a Reformed Presbyterian chapel, and some well conducted schools.

The noble ruins of Craig Nethan, or Dauphane Castle, the property of Lady Lucy Elizabeth Douglas, of Douglas (Countess of Home), are well deserving the notice of the tourist. A room is still shown, where, it is said, the unfortunate Queen Mary took refuge after her escape from Lochleven castle. There are two hiring fairs held, and two other for general business during the year. In the month of December are three market days, known as Big Wednesdays.

KIRKFIELD-BANK is a village in Lesmahago parish—about five miles E. from that village, and one mile W. from Lanark, situated on the high road to Glasgow. The Clyde is crossed at this place by a fine stone bridge erected by subscription. Its people are chiefly employed in weaving and carpet manufacturing, in the vicinity is the far-famed cataract 'Stonebyres,' which like Corra, consists of three leaps, altogether eighty-two feet high. At a short distance is StonebyreHouse enclosed in woods, the property of Lieutenant-General Thomas Monteath Douglas. The original fabric of this building has been nearly all replaced by a most elegant and enlarged erection. The house is approached by a pretty stone bridge, under which flows a small rivulet, and the gardens are in the highest state of cultivation. Few gaarishes posses such scenery for fertility and beauty, or such stse of subterreanna reasures.

RUTHERGLEN,

OR RUGLEN, as it is commonly called, is an ancient royal burgh in the parish of its name, situate on the line of the Clydesdale Junction Railway, two miles and a half south-east from Glasgow, and nine west from Hamilton. The town consists of one principal street with seven smaller ones branching from it; in its vicinity collieries are wrought, and chemical and dye works are in operation. The extensive power loom factory of Messrs. Patrick Robertson & Co., cotton and woollen manufacturers, and the large thread manufactory of Messrs. John Dick & Sons are both contiguous, and afford employment to a large number of the inhabitants: there are also a paper mill, an iron tube works and a boatbuilding yard. The town is lighted with gas. The places of worship are an Established church, a Quoad Sacra church, a Free church, a United Presbyterian church, and a Roman Catholic chapel—there are also several excellent schools, and an extensive circulating library. Rutherglen was erected into a royal burgh in the year 1126, by King David I; by his charter, the inhabitants enjoyed many privileges. At that period, small craft came up the Clyde to Rutherglen-quay. Glasgow, however, by its superior consequence, arising from its trade and manufactures, absorbed the privileges and engrossed the traffic of this burgh, and the Broomielaw has for years been the station of almost all external commerce. The Castle of Rutherglen (which stood in Castle-street, but of which not a trace now remains), underwent several sieges during the wars of King Robert, and it remained a place of strength until the battle of Langside, soon after which the Regent Murray, to revenge himself on the Hamilton family, in whose custody it then was, ordered it to be destroyed. It was in the old Church of Rutherglen that, in the year 1297, Sir John Monteith engaged to betray to the English his friend and companion, Sir William Wallace. The burgh is governed by a provost, two baillies, a treasurer, and fifteen councillors; a monthly court is held; it unites with Dumbarton, Kilmarnock, Port Glasgow, and Renfrew, in sending a representative to the legislature. The present member is the Hon. Edwd. B. Bouverie; Kilmarnock, is the returning burgh. Rutherglen gives the title of earl to the Marquis of Queensberry. The fairs of this town have been noted for a great show of horses particularly the Lanarkshire breed, esteemed the best for draught in Scotland; they are held on the first Friday after the fourth of May, first Tuesday after the fourth of June, and first Friday after the twenty-fifth of July, first Friday after the twenty-fifth of August, first Wednesday and Friday, and the Friday after the twenty-fifth of November.

POST OFFICE, 9 Main street, Mary Hendry, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (by foot post from GLASGOW) every morning at eight, and every afternoon at two; and are despatched thereto every morning at a quarter before ten, and every evening at a quarter past five.

SHOTTS AND CAMBUSNETHAN.

WITH THE VILLAGES OF CLELAND, WISHAW, STAIN, AND SALYSBURGH.

THE parish of Shotts lies in the north-east quarter of the county, and is 14 miles in length by about 10 in breadth; bounded by New Monkland on the north, Bothwell on the west, Cambusnethan on the south, and the county of Linlithgow on the east; the Amon and the Aven have their sources within the district, which is likewise watered by the streams of the North and South Calder, running through the extensive reservoir and Lilly Loch which supplies the Forth and Clyde Canal, as likewise several mills. This parish abounds in coal and ironstone. The original name is said to be derived from that of a noted robber, Bertram, or Bartram, the Rob Roy of his day; he was shot in the reign of Robert II, about half a mile east from the church, which spot still retains the appellation Shotts-burn. The village of CLELAND is in this parish, close to which the Omoa Iron Works are situated; there is also a very neat school, and school-house, the site for which was given by the proprietor, and built by subscription, and is now supported partly by the proprietor. The village called Kirk-o'-Shotts, stands on the south road, betwixt Edinburgh and Glasgow, in a bare and elevated part of the district, fifteen miles from Glasgow and twenty-seven from Edinburgh. The present church was erected in 1820, in the centre of the parish, on a commanding site. The works of the Shotts Iron Company, are situate about three miles and a half west of the church; a great number of hands are employed in this establishment; the company patronise a school, and provide a house rent free for the master. There is another school here, endowed by the late Mr. Wilson, of Whiteburn.

CAMBUSNETHAN parish is situate in the middle ward of the county, on the north-east bank of the Clyde, from which it stretches, in an eastern direction a distance of thirteen miles, by three in breadth. There are luxuriant orchards throughout this district, and the apples of Cambusnethan have long been in high estimation. Freestone, ironstone and coal abound beneath the surface of the land. In this parish are the extensive Coltness Iron Works; also two places of worship of the establishment, a Free church, two for the United, and one for the Reformed Presbyterians, likewise three schools, one of which is patronised by the Coltness Iron Co., the others being the parochial and Wilson's endowed. The village stands on a cross road a little eastward of the thoroughfare from Glasgow to Lanark, fifteen miles from the former and ten from the latter town. The large village of WISHAW (in which there is an extensive distillery), is in this parish, in which stands Wishaw Castle, the residence of Lord Belhaven, whose extensive grounds extend some distance into the parish of Shotts. Two fairs are held at Wishaw—on the second Thursdays in May and October.

STAIN is a village in Cambusnethan parish, situated close to the works of the Shotts Iron Company, and between five and six miles from Wishaw; some respectable shops, an inn, post office (where money orders are granted and paid), Congregational chapel and endowed school, are all that it contains worthy of notice; an omnibus runs between this place and Wishaw, morning and evening.

STRATHAVEN,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF GLASSFORD AND STONEHOUSE.

STRATHAVEN is a market town and burgh of barony, in the parish of Avendale; 44 miles S.W. from Edinburgh, 15 s. by E. from Glasgow, 30 N.E. from Ayr, 21 E. by N. from Kilmarnock, 14 W. from Lanark, and 7½s. from Hamilton; situate on the river Aven. The town is of considerable antiquity—but possesses no pretensions to elegance in its dwellings, or uniformity in the arrangement of them. Like many other towns, not only in the British islands, but throughout the European continent, its seems to have been indebted for its origin to the feudal era, when every chieftain had his castle or fortress for safety or aggression; the ruins of one of these frowning edifices, presenting 'shattered and haggard walls,' stand on an eminence to the south, overhanging Strathaven. The excellent breed of horses, for which Lanarkshire is so much distinguished, was introduced to this vicinity, upwards of a century ago, by a Duke of Hamilton, who brought some fine horses from Holstein, and placed them in the parks attached to the castle; from this origin, the race of draught cattle was propagated over the entire district. The offspring of the cow has also conferred distinction on this town. The herbage of the neighbourhood is supposed to be of a highly nutritious quality, and peculiarly adapted for the improvement of the flesh and milk of cattle; in consequence of this, Stra'ven veal has long been held in high estimation, and a Stra'ven calf is not unfrequently sold at almost as high a price as a cow reared upon some less favoured pasture, Strathaven is not a place of much trade; the most prominent branches are cheese dealing and the weaving of cotton goods; there are two or three inns, and three banking establishments. The town was erected into a burgh of barony in the year 1450, in favour of the then powerful chief, William Earl Douglas, and is governed by a baron baillie.

Besides the national church, three are three United Presbyterian chapels, and a Free church, an United Associate Synod meeting-house, and a chapel for Independents. On the south side of the river Aven, a Roman road can be distinctly traced for several miles. The market, which is on Thursday, is well attended; fairs are held on the first Thursdays in January and March, and April for cattle and hiring servants, Thursday in Whitsun week, the last Thursday in June, the second Thursday in August, and (the old fair) on the second of November.

GLASSFORD village, in the parish of its name, is situate on the road betwixt Kilbride and Strathaven, two miles from the latter town. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the cotton manufacture.

The village of STONEHOUSE is seven miles and a half from the town of Hamilton, situate near the south bank of the Avon. A little above the junction of the Kype water with that river is a beautiful and romantic waterfall, descending nearly fifty feet.

LINLITHGOWSHIRE.

OR WEST LOTHIAN, is a small county, of a very irregular figure, lying on the south shore of the Frith of Forth, having Edinburghshire on the east and south-east, Lanarkshire on the south-west, and Stirlingshire on the west. The Briech and the Almond waters form the boundary line betwixt this county and that of Edinburgh, except at Mid-Calder, where the latter intrudes more than a mile into Linlithgowshire. From east to west (that is, along the shore of the Forth), the county extends sixteen miles; along its south-eastern boundary (or from Queensferry to its most eastern point), it measures about twenty: the superficial contents of the whole being about one hundred and twenty square miles or seventy-six thousand eight hundred statute acres.

EARLY HISTORY.—Much that is applicable to the antiquities of, and historical events connected with, this county, has been already sufficiently detailed in the annals of Edinburghshire and the capital—this district having formed, at an early period, a portion of the province of Lothian possessed by the Anglo-Saxons: some few particulars, more distinctly referable to this county, may, however, be here added. The Gadenii tribe of British people being overrun by the Romans, the latter formed a firm but not permanent settlement in the shire; the subjugated nations of the world had snapped their fetters—they even menaced the extinction of the Roman name; the legions were recalled to avert the catastrophe, and Britain was left exposed to the devastations of her more ferocious neighbours. During the residence of the Romans in West Lothian, which was the outermost part of their conquest in this direction, they gave a site to the wall which they built across the island. No part of Valentia was so well protected by forts. From the station at Cramond, a Roman road proceeded westward, along the shore of the Forth to Carriden, where the wall terminated; and along the sea shore were several posts, which, according to old historians, were strengthened by towers, and stood the bulwarks of the Roman sway in this part of Britain. In modern times there have been a variety of urns, coins, and other relics of this conquering race discovered in the shire. It is understood that after the departure of the Romans, and a good deal later, this part of Lothian became occupied by the Scoto-Irish and northern adventurers, in greater numbers than in that portion now called Edinburghshire.

SURFACE, SOIL, PRODUCE, &c.—The aggregate surface of Linlithgowshire is neither flat nor hilly. The most remarkable protuberances form a range running obliquely across the middle of the county. The central and western parts have the most hilly ground, while, on the east and south, the land is mostly level. The elevations are generally well clothed with verdure and ornamental woods; about one-third part of the whole county is either woodland, or old pasture, laid down with artificial grasses; and there are more than four-fifths of the shire enclosed. Until the year 1723, there was little improvement in the agriculture of the district; soon after this period, John, Earl of Stair introduced new and advantageous modes of husbandry, and commenced the cultivation of the cabbage, turnip, and carrot by the plough; the example of this nobleman was beneficially followed by Charles, first Earl of Hopetoun; but both dying, thirty years elapsed before agricultural spirit was again actively displayed. In more recent times, some practical farmers, possessing the advantages of skill and capital, have brought the cultivation of the shire to comparative perfection; and now this rich and lovely district participates in the general improvements of southern Caledonia. With the exception of Cairnaple, in the parish of Torphichen, which rises about fifteen hundred feet above the level of the sea, the mountains of this district are not of great altitude, nor are they numerous—Binny Craig and Cocklerue are the only other eminences that attract notice; they are respectively about five hundred feet high.

MINERALS AND MANUFACTURES.—Linlithgowshire contains a store of minerals of the most useful kind: coal abounds throughout, limestone is equally prevalent, in some parts ironstone is also found in profusion, and the whole surface seems to rest on a bed of sandstone of the finest quality; silver and lead mines were formerly wrought; and there is plenty of marl, potters' clay, brick clay, and red chalk. Many places present volcanic appearances, particularly at Dundas Hill, in the parish of Dalmeny, where there is a bold front of Basaltic rocks, exhibiting in some instances columns of that character. Of the MANUFACTURES of the shire, salt is the chief article; and there are considerable tanneries, breweries, distilleries and chemical works in the principal towns. The traffic in coal employs a great number of the inhabitants. This county is rather remarkable for the state of its population, having undergone less increase in its amount within the last eighteen years than most other districts, especially those which are more favoured by being the seat of manufactures. Besides this, the circumstance of stagnation, or at least but slow progress in population, may be attributed to its scarcity of large towns, and the general dependence on agriculture under a steady mode of farming.

RIVERS AND RAILWAYS.—The only river of consequence is the Almond (or Amond); but there are a number of considerable rivulets and burns, and the Forth yields advantages which amply compensate for the deficiency of river navigation. The Almond rises in the high grounds of Lanarkshire, and, pursuing a north-easterly course, falls into the sea at Cramond: at its mouth it assumes the appearance of a little loch or arm of the sea, running up the bottom of a woody ravine; but it is not navigable except for a very short distance, and that only for boats and small sloops. The main line of RAILWAY that passes through this county is the Edinburgh and Glasgow; it runs to Linlithgow, and Whitburn; passes three miles from Bo'ness and four from Queensferry. Bathgate and Uphall, are communicated with by the Bathgate Branch of the Edinburgh and Glasgow line; so is Bo'ness by one from the Monkland line.

DIVISIONS AND REPRESENTATION, &c.—This county was probably separated into a sheriffdom in the reign of David I; it was placed by Robert, however, under the administration of a constable, and so it continued until the time of James IV. No other district appears to have been so divided into petty baronies, baillieries, regalities and other independent jurisdictions; nor so domineered over by a number of peers inimical to peace and regardless of justice. The oldest family in the shire is that of Dundas, of Dundas, who can trace an unbroken line of descent and residence on the same spot up to the reign of William the Lion (1165), an antiquity rarely to be found surpassed, not only in Scotland, but in any other country. Linlithgowshire comprises eleven parishes and two parts of parishes, which, with two in Mid-Lothian and four in Stirlingshire, form one presbytery. It contains two royal burghs namely, Linlithgow and Queensferry; the next largest town is Bathgate. Its seaport is Bo'ness, and there are a number of thriving villages. The burghs of Linlithgow, Hamilton, Lanark, Airdrie and Falkirk, in conjunction, send one member to the imperial parliament, and the shire at large another.

BATHGATE,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF ARMADALE, BLACKRIDGE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BATHGATE is a market town, an independent burgh of barony, and a parish; situated on the middle road betwixt Edinburgh and Glasgow, 18 miles W. from the former, 24 E. from the latter, and between five and six S. from Linlithgow. It is a station on the Bathgate Branch of the Edinburgh and Glasgow and Monklands Railways. Another line is now in progress to Airdrie. The town occupies a pleasant site, near the southern base of a great ridge of hills, extending across the county and sheltering the town on the north and east; while it has a fine southern exposure, and is seen at a considerable distance from that direction and from the west. These hills abound with limestone quarries, in which are found fine specimens of fossil remains, interesting to geologists. Bathgate lays claim to high antiquity. Malcolm IV. granted to the monks of Holyrood the church of Bathket, with the land belonging to it; at one period the town and its adjoining lands formed part of the ample possessions of King Robert Bruce, which in 1306 he gave in dowry with his daughter to Walter the Great Steward—and this marriage introduced the Stuart family to the throne of Scotland. The town consists of a new and an old part, the former is tolerably well built, and most of the streets are paved; it is abundantly supplied with water of an excellent quality, the property of the burgh; and is lighted with gas, furnished by a joint-stock company. Of late years a great number of elegant houses and shops have been built. Few places of its size can shew so much bustle and tidiness, and the town is considered to be very healthy. Bathgate was made a burgh of barony by Charles II. in 1661, and was created a free and independent burgh of barony by act of parliament in 1824, and placed under the control of a provost, three baillies, twelve councillors, a treasurer, a town clerk, and a procurator fiscal; the election of the magistrates and council takes place annually in September, by the votes of the burgesses. A justice of peace court sits occasionally, and the sheriff holds small debts courts once a quarter. Of late years the town has acquired a very large increase of population, in a great measure owing to the adjacent coal and ironstone mines. The far-famed Boghead and Torbanehill gas coal is found in abundance within two miles of the town, and sells at very high prices. Extensive paraffin oil works are within the same limits; also an iron foundry. The weaving of goods for the Glasgow manufacturers is conducted by resident agents, and employs many hands. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, a United Presbyterian, and Evangelical Union chapels, also a Roman Catholic chapel, recently erected, all of which have a manse or residence for the minister. The burgh boasts a superior educational institution in the Bathgate Academy, endowed by the late John Newland, Esq. of Kingston, Jamaica, who was a native of this town; the munificent sum bequeathed by this gentleman amounted, previous to the erection of the building, to between £16,000 and £17,000. The academy stands on a commanding and healthful site, in the immediate vicinity of the town, and is an elegant and extensive structure—it comprises five large class-rooms, library-room, and rector's house. The courses of education are conducted on the most approved systems by a rector and other teachers. The youth of the parish have thus the benefit of a first-rate instruction in all the useful and many of the more learned branches, free of expense; while others, not parishioners, have an opportunity of participating in the same advantage by means of very moderate fees. The parish school-house, which is situated near the academy, has a handsome appearance. Robertson's hotel is the principal and most commodious establishment in the town, centrally situated; at this house commercial men and others will find ample accommodation, including posting, in all its branches. The market day is Wednesday, when a large supply of grain of all kinds is brought from the surrounding country. The buyers and sellers are now accommodated in a splendid building erected in the principal street at a great expense, called the Corn Exchange. The building also contains spacious rooms for the courts and for other public meetings. The authorities of the burgh hold seven annual fairs,—namely, on the third Wednesdays in April, July and August, the first Wednesdays after Whitsuntide and Martinmas, and the fourth Wednesdays in June and October—all old style; the Whitsuntide and Martinmas fairs are the principal, and well attended by cattle dealers. The population of the town and parish by the census of 1851 was 4,533; since then it has increased to nearly 10,000.

ARMADALE is a populous village in the parish of and two miles W. from Bathgate, on the main road from Edinburgh to Glasgow. It has within the last three years become one of the most flourishing villages in Scotland, being situated amongst large mineral fields, consisting of ironstone, gas coal, common coal, &c. The village takes its name from an estate, the property of Sir W. Honyman, whose predecessor was a senator of the College of Justice, under the title of Lord Armadale. A railway passing near to the village has been in operation for about four years (1859) for mineral traffic; and a passenger line is in progress of being completed from Bathgate to Airdrie, and Armadale will form one of its stations. Several hamlets have sprung around the village. A large and commodious school has recently been erected by public subscription, and is conducted by an efficient teacher.

BLACKRIDGE is a small hamlet in the parish of Torphichen, about five miles and a half from Bathgate to the west, on the Edinburgh and Glasgow road, seated in an agricultural district. A church has been erected in the village.

BORROWSTOUNNESS,

AND THE PARISH OF CARRIDEN, WITH THE VILLAGES OF GRANGE PANS, MUIRHOUSES, BRIDGENESS, BLACKNESS, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

BORROWSTOUNNESS (or as it is now generally pronounced Bo'ness) is an ancient sea-port, burgh of barony and parish, bounded on the north by the Frith of Forth, on the south by the parish of Linlithgow, on the east by Carriden, and on the west by the river Avon, which separates it from Stirlingshire. Its length eastward is about four miles, and its average breadth is about two. The town is 18 miles W. from Edinburgh, 9 miles W. from Queen's Ferry, 3½ N. from Linlithgow, 8 miles from Falkirk, and 5 miles E from Grangemouth. It is situated on the south shore of the Frith of Forth, on a piece of low ground or ness, and consists principally of two streets, running eastward, terminating in one of nearly the same length, continuing the same direction, the greater portion of the houses forming which appear to be of very old date. Between 1750 and 1780, Bo'ness was one of the most thriving towns on the east coast, and ranked as the third port in Scotland; but when the junction of the Forth and Clyde was effected by means of the great canal, Grangemouth situated at the east end of the canal, became the chief seat of commerce, and in 1810, was erected into a separate port with Custom House. The trade of Bo'ness then greatly declined. It is the seat of a Custom House, whose district extends on both sides of the Forth from Cramond Water and Donibristle Point to the boundaries of Alloa. The harbour is good and safe—consisting of a basin 240 feet in breadth, with two piers 566 feet each in length, and has a depth of water at spring tide of from 16 to 20 feet. Among other advantages and conveniences belonging to the harbour that of moderate port charges and a patent slip of the best construction may be mentioned; by the latter vessels of from three to four hundred tons burthen may be drawn out of the water, and the cradle will admit two at once; this important erection is under the superintendence of the harbour master. A branch of the Slamannan Railway terminates at the harbour, which has a large mineral traffic. Bo'ness is the chief place on the Forth for the manufacture of salt, of which article a considerable quantity is exported annually. Besides these works there are a distillery, an earthenware manufactury, a fire brick works, a ropery, two iron foundries, and a chemical works. And at KINNEIL, about half a mile westward, is an extensive iron works, erected about twelve years ago, which affords employment to fifteen hundred persons. At these works are four blast furnaces for smelting the ore, with which, as well as that of coal, the Kinneil estate abounds; from this cause the population of the parish and the shipping of late years has been greatly increased. In 1839, the aggregate tonnage of the port was 6,521; in 1851, the tonnage inward was 14,148; outward 97,565: total, 111,713. A branch of the Clydesdale Bank is established in the town. The Duke of Hamilton is superior of the burgh, and he appoints a baillie for its government. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, a Free church, and a chapel for United Presbyterians; also a parochial and several other schools. Kinneil House, one of the family seats of the Duke of Hamilton, is the most remarkable building in the parish, here the celebrated Watt realised some of his earliest improvements upon the steam engine. The barony of Kinneil is one of the most ancient possessions of the house of Hamilton. The Roman wall of Antoninus, commonly called 'Graham's Dyke,' passes through the parish; and within a short distance of the town to the south-east the traces of a Roman camp are still visible. The village of BORROWSTOUN lies about a mile inland from Bo'ness.

The parish of CARRIDEN is bounded by Bo'ness on the west, Abercorn on the east, and Linlithgow on the south; it lies on the south bank of the Forth, and is not more than two miles in length by one in breadth. he whole district is well enclosed and cultivated. This and the adjoining parish of Bo'ness were amongst the first localities in Scotland, in which coal was found. At present mining operations in both coal and iron are carried on very extensively. The other branches of trade form part of what is given under Bo'ness.

Within the parish of Carriden, besides its own village are those of GRANGE-PANS, MUIRHOUSES, BRIDGENESS, and BLACKNESS; the latter, which in former times, previous to the rise of Bo'ness, from local advantages, was a harbour of considerable importance, was also celebrated for its castle, which, during the reign of James VI., was the principal state prison in Scotland, and as such received within its gloomy walls many distinguished persons; one of the most remakrable of its prisoners was Lord Ochiltree, who, for accusing the Marquis of Hamilton of aspiring to the Scottish crown, was here confined during nearly the whole reign of Charles I.—upwards of twenty years—and was not liberated till the country fell under the dominion of Cromwell. Blackness Castle is one of the ancient fortresses, whose preservation was guarranteed by the act of union. The edifice was converted to the purposes of a barrack in the course of the long protracted war; it is still preserved in a sufficient degree of repair, and in charge of an inferior officer. The pier of Bridgeness affords good accommodation for vessels employed in the exportation of salt, coals, iron, and stone. The place of worship is the parish church. There is a parochial school, and one for girls, with a subscription school, at Grange-Pans. Colonel Gardiner was born at Burnfoot in this parish.

POST OFFICE, South-street, BORROWSTOUNNESS, Thomas B. Macintosh, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from LINLITHGOW) every morning at twenty minutes before eleven, and in the evening at twenty minutes before seven; and are despatched thereto every morning at twenty minutes before six, and in the afternoon at twenty minutes past two.

LINLITHGOW AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

LINLITHGOW, popularly pronounced Lithgow, is an ancient royal burgh, the capital of the shire and parish of its name, and the seat of the presbytery of Linlithgow; 16 miles W. from Edinburgh, 31 E. by N. from Glasgow, 8 E. from Falkirk, and three and a half from Bo'ness; seated on the bank of a fine lake, and on the Edinburgh and Glasgow Railway, for which line a principal station is established here. It is chiefly formed of a single street, which runs east and west along the south edge of the water. The houses have, in general, an old and decayed, but yet substantial look, which indicate that the place at a former time enjoyed great prosperity; and it still possesses a variety of objects that cannot fail to interest the attentive traveller and impress the mind with an idea of its ancient grandeur. Amongst these are the magnificent ruins of its royal palace, the venerable church adjoining, and the terrace on which both edifices were erected; the beautiful lake, the lofty trees, and the plantations scattered over the pleasure grounds of its once-famed palace. The latter forms a square overlooking the lake to the north; it has been one of the noblest residences of royalty in Scotland; in it the unfortunate Mary Queen of Scotts was born, 5th December, 1542. Among the ancient dwellings a particular house is pointed out to strangers as the place from whence Hamilton of Bothwell-haugh, shot the regent Murray; as is also St. Catherine's aisle in the church, in which the spectre is said to have appeared to King James, warning him to keep from the battle of Flodden Field The ancient town house—an elegant structure, erected in 1688, was partially destroyed by fire in 1847, but was immediately repaired, and contains a council chamber and sheriff court-room, and a large hall, tastefully decorated, for public meetings. To the north of this stands the county hall, wherein are various apartments for the sheriff and other public functionaries. The hall, which is handsome and convenient, contains faithful full-length portraits of the late General Earl of Hopetoun, and of his brother, Sir Alexander Hope, both distinguished officers. Linlithgow is one of the oldest royal burghs in Scotland. The Town Council, is fifteen in number, and the magistrates elected from the council are a provost and three baillies. The burgh unites with Lanark, Hamilton, Airdrie and Falkirk, in sending one member to the imperial parliament. Immediately opposite to the town-house is a fountain of singular and beautiful appearance, completed on the 4th of June, 1807, in imitation of the ancient Cross Well; it is of hexagonal form, ascended by steps; the water descends from the top of the fountain, which is surmounted by a unicorn holding a shield; the stream falls into a basin, from whence it is spouted into a larger one through the mouths of six grotesque figures, whence it again issues through the jaws of six other heads into a still more capacious receptacle, which is surrounded by statues in male and female ancient costumes; here all the streams are concentrated, and pass unperceived through a pillar—finding egress by another mouth in a copious gush, from which the inhabitants are supplied with water. The whole of this architectural curiosity is surrounded by iron palisades of light and elegant workmanship. Several other fountains, of simple formation, are to be seen in the town. The combination poor house at St. Magdalen's, on rising ground about one mile from the town, was erected in 1854, and is a neat and commodious building, including several lunatic wards. It commands a beautiful and extensive prospect. The cost of the erection was £9,000, defrayed by the following parishes in proportion, according to the number of shares which each has in the establishment. Linlithgow is the largest contributor, and others in the following order:—Borrowstounness, Bathgate, Whitburn, Carriden, Kirkliston, Muiravonside, and Abercorn. Tanning, currying, and shoe making may be deemed the staples of the place. In the tanning and currying branches are several large establishments, the principal of which belong to Messrs. T. Nimmo & Co., and Messrs. P. & A. M. Callender. There is also close to the town a paper mill, a distillery, and soap works. The Union canal passes close by the south side of the town: an extensive basin of excellent masonry offers commodious accommodation to vessels trading on this canal; and a beautiful acqueduct, unsurpassed in the united kingdom, conducts its water on twelve arches, over the river Avon and a deep and extensive valley. The railway before mentioned passes along the south side of the main street. Near to the bridge, about a mile to the west, the line is carried over the Avon by means of a stupendous viaduct of nineteen arches, of substantial masonry. This structure, with the acqueduct, excites the observation of the traveller.

The parish church of St. Michael is situated contiguous to the palace ruins, and is a noble pile of Gothic architecture, with a fine tower steeple. The other places of worship are a Free church, two United Presbyterian Chapels, one for Independents, and there is also a congregation of Roman Catholics, who have at present no regular place of worship. There is a burgh school, and several good educational establishments, both public and private—boarding and day; and there is a very useful charity school, erected and endowed by the benevolence of Mrs. Douglas, sister of the late venerable and lamented Dr. Dobbie, minister of this parish. There is a weekly market for grain, held on Friday, and there are fairs on the first Friday after the second Tuesday in January; February 25th, the third Friday in April, the second Tuesday in June, August 2nd, and the first Friday in November.

QUEENSFERRY

OR, as it is sometimes called, South Queensferry (in contradistinction to North Queensferry, a harbour of Fifeshire), is a royal burgh and parish, the latter being confined within the limits of the former; 9 miles west from Edinburgh, the same distance east from Bo'ness; and 4 south-east from Ratho; a station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow Railway; situated betwixt the Shore of Frith of Forth and the ridge that rises from the coast. It is an excellent and safe harbour and can be entered at any time according to the tide. It is a place of considerable antiquity, having received its name from the Queen of Malcolm Canmore (Margaret who usually made choice of the ferry at this place for the passage of the Frith. Under her auspices the town increased in size, population and commerce; but in the present day it is not conspicuous for either: it has no foreign trade, and through the winter it is chiefly supported by fishing. Some little consequence belongs to it from being the ferry at Newhall (a little to the eastward of the town) over the Forth; there is another pier a short distance to the westward, for the convenience of boats when they cannot make the former point: they are both handsome slips or piers, and run a considerable distance into the water, whereby boats can effect a landing of passengers at all times of the tide. At this place the Frith is contracted to a gut of two miles in width; and in the middle of the strait lies a small rocky island, called Inchgarvie, About half a mile to the westward is Port Edgar, so named from Prince Edgar having landed there: from this place his Majesty George IV, when on a visit to Scotland, embarked on his return to England. As a royal burgh, Queensferry is governed by a provost, two baillies, and a town council; the burgh unites with Stirling, Culross, Inverkeithing, and Dunfermline, in returning one member to parliament. The Right Hon. the Earl of Roseberry having given a piece of ground for a bleachgreen to the inhabitants, and also conveyed water into the town for their use, the magistrates and council, to evince their gratitude for these favours, have raised a tablet, with an appropriate inscription, over the fount. The places of worship are a church of the Establishment, and a chapel for United Presbyterians. A parochial school and one for infants, with two or three private schools, are the educational establishments. A fair is held on the second Friday in August.

POST OFFICE, Elizabeth Meikle, Post Mistress.—Letters from all parts arrive (from EDINBURGH), every morning at nine, afternoon at one, and evening at five, and are despatched thereto at half-past eight in the morning, four in the afternoon, and eight in the evening.

UPHALL, WITH BROXBURN AND ECCLESMACHAN.

THE parish of UPHALL is bounded by Kirkliston on the north-east and east, by Mid-Calder on the south, Livingston on the west, and Linlithgow and Ecclesmachan on the north. It is intersected from west to east by the road from Glasgow to Edinburgh; and is watered by a rivulet called BROXBURN, on which and the public road stands the straggling village of that name, at the distance of ten miles from Edinburgh, and seven from Linlithgow. The western extremity of the village is crossed by the Union Canal from Edinburgh. A church of the Establishment is at Uphall, and one for a Free congregation at Broxburn. It also contains a parochial school. In the chancel of Uphall church are deposited the remains of the Hon. Henry Erskine, as also of the late Lord Chancellor Erskine. The parish abounds in coal, sandstone, limestone and ironstone. The district is chiefly of an upland character; but it is under the best process of agriculture and enclosure, and possesses some large plantations.

The small parish of ECCLESMACHAN lies south of Abercorn and east of Linlithgow, about five miles from the latter town, and two from Uphall: it is four miles in length by only one in breath; is watered by a tributary of the Almond; and near the church is a weak sulphurous spring, called the Bullion Well. There is a church of the Establishment and a parochial school in the parish, which is a flat corn country, altogether under cultivation, and based on freestone.

WHITEBURN,

CROFTHEAD, LONGRIDGE, BLACKBURN, AND LIVINGSTONE.

WHITEBURN, or WHITBURN, is a parish and village—the latter 21 miles s.w. from Edinburgh, 10 s. from Linlithgow, and four from Bathgate; situated on the south road from Edinburgh to Glasgow, and on the Edinburgh and Glasgow Railway, for which line the company have a station here. It is a regularly built little place, and is supported by the coal and iron mines with which the parish abounds, and a little weaving of cotton goods for the Glasgow houses. It contains a public library of twelve hundred volumes, and a handsome school-house—the latter built by the trustees of the late Mr. Wilson, who bequeathed a considerable part of his property for the laudable purpose of erecting and supporting charity schools in the district. Within the parish are three other villages, called EAST WHITEBURN, LONGRIDGE, and CROFTHEAD. The two latter are populous and increasing, and the inhabitants are chiefly employed by the neighbouring coal works. The places of worship are the Established church, a Free church, and a United Presbyterian chapel. The parish is watered by the Almond, the Breich, and two small rivulets. There is much moss and pasture land in the upper portion; in the lower division, on the contrary, the surface is arable, and admirably planted and enclosed.

LIVINGSTONE is a parish and village, well enclosed, and stretching from five to six miles along the north bank of the Breich water, which separates it from Edinburghshire, by a breadth of from three to four miles. The village, which is not large, is six miles from Whiteburn, and four from Blackburn, situated on the banks of the Almond water, and on one of the roads from Edinburgh to Glasgow. The parish church is situated at the west end of the village, and the other place of worship is a Free church, erected in 1858, with a manse. There is also in the village a parochial school.

BLACKBURN is a small village seated on the banks of the Almond: it contains a cotton mill, which employs a considerable number of persons of both sexes.

NAIRNSHIRE.

THIS is a small maritime county in the north-eastern part of Scotland, once forming a portion of the ancient province of Moray. It is bounded on the north by the Moray Frith, on the east by the shire of Elgin (or Moray), and on the south and west by the county of Inverness. It extends from the coast, on the north, to the small lake of Lochindorb (situate at its extreme southern apex), on the south, twenty miles; the breadth along the shore is twelve miles, and its sides vary from twelve to twenty-two miles asunder. The shire comprises two hundred and ten square miles of land, and three of lakes; the number of acres in the shire is one hundred and thirty-seven thousand, five hundred.

SOIL, PRODUCE, &c.—The agricultural properties of Nairnshire assimilate so closely with those of the county of Elgin, that but brief notice of its wealth and capabilities in this respect is here necessary. Exclusive of the hilly part of the district, it may be described as a narrow border of level ground, along the shore, from one to nearly six miles in breadth—and here, for the most part, it is arable; but as the country recedes farther from the coast, it becomes bleak and hilly: there are, however, no eminences of great altitude or note in the whole county. The farms are usually small, and most frequently unenclosed. Sheep and black cattle are reared in considerable numbers, and chiefly fed on the natural pasturage. The county is crossed, in its southern or hilly part, by the river Findhorn, which runs in a direction from south-west to north-east; parallel with this rapid stream, about eight or nine miles to the west, courses the river Nairn, which also runs into the Moray Frith. Besides the rivers, there are several small brooks, whose banks are covered with woods and plantations; and there are some elegant seats scattered over the country. RAILWAY.—The only railway which passes through this county is the Inverness and Aberdeen Junction, on which line Nairn is a station

Small as this shire is, it possesses a distinct political and judicial establishment. It comprises three complete parochial divisions, with seven parts of parishes; and contains one royal burgh, NAIRN, which is the only town. This burgh, in conjunction with Inverness, Fortrose, and Forres, sends one member to parliament; and the County unites with Elginshire in returning another representative

NAIRN,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF AULDEARN, CAWDOR, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

NAIRN is a royal burgh, the capital of its county and its parish 155 miles N. from Edingburgh, 103 W. by N. from Aberdeen, 32 W. from Fochabers, 23 W. from Elgin, 18 N.E. from Inverness, and 11 E. from Forres; situated on the coast of the Moray Frith, upon the left bank of the Nairn, at the confluence of that river with the sea. The town is composed of one main street (High-street), and several inferior streets and lanes. Approaching the town from the west, is seen the Nairn Hospital, a handsome building erected by subscription in 1846. Near the centre of High-street is a spacious structure erected about 1818, containing the town and county gaol, and a town and county court-room; the latter, which is spacious and elegant, is occasionally used as a ball-room: the pile which is built of fine freestone (obtained in great plenty in the neighbourhood), is surmounted by a spire. The town is connected with the right bank of the Nairn by a good bridge, which, as well as the harbour, and a handsome pier erected by subscription (aided by government), were, in the year 1829, much injured by the calamitous Moray floods. The harbour is at present undergoing extensive enlargement and improvement, which was much needed and the new pier will be very complete. For a good sea-port town Nairn enjoys certain advantages—obtained from a fertile country yielding various articles proper for exportation; and if encouragement were given to establish a ferry between Nairn and Cromarty, it would open an intercourse between the country on the northern and southern sides of the Firth.

The exports consist of timber, corn, potatoes, eggs, smoked haddocks, herrings and freestone. The imports are groceries, hardware, lime and coal. Three branch banking establishments are settled here and also two savings' banks. The herring fishery and curing process is carried on successfully, and salmon fishing is also prosecuted. About four miles to the east is the celebrated 'Royal Brackla Distillery,' a very extensive establishment, long famous for the excellence of its whisky. The Inverness and Aberdeen Junction Railway, the station for which, is about a quarter of a mile from the town, facilitate intercourse with the surrounding country, and the transit of goods and produce.

At what period Nairn was erected into a royal burgh is uncertain; the oldest charter extant is that obtained from James VI, in the year 1589, being the renewal of one granted by Alexander; Charles II confirmed the charter of James, and vested the government of the burgh in a town council, consisting of seventeen members, namely the provost, three baillies, a dean of guild and treasurers, with eleven councillors, nine of which make a quorum; the whole of the trades form but one corporation. The burgh unites with Inverness, Fortrose and Forres in returning one member to parliament. A sheriff's court is held here weekly and a small debt court once a fortnight. Nairn is much resorted to in summer for bathing! its beach is inviting, its baths convenient, and in the neighbourhood is some fine scenery and many agreeable residences.

The places of worship are the parish and Free churches, and a chapel each for United Presbyterians, English and Scotch Episcopalians, and Independents. The town is well provided with institutions for instruction: in addition to the parochial establishment, there are free church and assembly schools and an academy for the education of more advanced pupils: there is likewise an excellent female school, well conducted and attended. Indeed, as regards good and cheap education, Nairn merits a conspicuous station; it also possesses several religious, benevolent, and literary societies, which are respectably supported. At the western extremity of the town, adjoining the parish school, a neat monument was erected, some years since, to Mr. John Straith, who was forty years schoolmaster. Fairs are held on the third Friday in April, 20th June (if Wednesday or Thursday), on the first Wednesday after the 20th, the 13th August, or on the first lawful day after the market of Campbeltown; the fourth Tuesday in September; on the Friday after the third Tuesday in October, and on the first Friday in November.

AULDEARN, anciently called Erin is a parish and village—the latter a burgh of barony, is situated 2½ miles S.E. from Nairn. In the immediate neighbourhood of the village is the scene of a victory gained by the Marquess of Montrose over the forces of the covenanters. A church of the Establishment and a Free church are the places of worship; and the schools are one parochial and another for infants.

About five miles west of Nairn is the interesting and picturesque village of CAWDOR where, upon the banks of the river of its name, is an excellent inn frequented by tourists and families, who visit this spot to contemplate the charming scenery around, and the towers of the ancient castle—once the proud seat of the Thanes of Cawdor. It is now occupied as a hunting lodge by the Earl of Cawdor. The stranger is granted access to the interior of this interesting structure; where are seen vaulted chambers, spiral staircases, and tapestried rooms; and the chamber is shown where, according to Shakspere, King Duncan was foully murdered by Macbeth. From the summit of the castle is commanded one of the most extensive and lovely views in this county; and many parties of the gay and the fashionable appreciate by their presence, in the summer and autumn, the various beauties of this favoured locality.

THE

THE ORKNEY ISLES.

KNOWN to the ancients by the name of Orcades, are situate in the Northern sea, separated from Caithness-shire, in Scotland, by the strait of the sea called the Pentland Frith, and lying between the parallels of 58° 44′ and 59° 25′ north latitude, and 2° 30′ west longitude; from the coast of Scotland they are distant four leagues, and from the Shetland Isles about fifteen. The whole of the Orkneys have been estimated at 150,000 square acres; of these there were, at no distant date, 90,000 in uncultivated commons, 30,000 in field pastures and meadow, 24,000 in tillage (now much greater), and 4,000 covered with fresh water. The form of the islands, from the operations of the ocean, and the rapidity of the tides, is extremely irregular; and from these circumstances the dimensions of some of them are ascertained with difficulty. They are separated from one another by portions of water denominated 'sounds,' friths,' or 'ferries,' some of which are only a mile broad, whilst others are more than five: though thus closely connected together, the whole of them are of considerable extent; for, from the south-west to the north-east, the points farthest removed from each other, the distance is not less than seventy miles, and they are upwards of forty in another direction. The earliest inhabitants of these islands appear to have been Picts, a tribe originally Scandinavian, who, at an unknown period before the Christian era, established themselves in the northern and western parts of Scotland. Diodorus Siculus mentions Cape Orcas as one of the extremities of Britain; and the Orcades are first named, in the second century, by Pomponius Mela, who states their number at thirty—Pliny augments them to forty, but Ptolomy makes them only thirty; Tacitus asserts that the Orcades were discovered and subdued by Agricola, which implies that they were then inhabited. The origin of the name is undoubtedly Teutonic, and is probably derived from Orkn, a large marine animal—a term that has been applied both to whales and seals: ORKNEY, therefore; appears to mean 'the land of whales' or of 'seals.' The Orcades seem to have been esteemed of some importance in the time of Constantine, as they are especially mentioned with Gaul and Britain as the patrimony of his youngest son. Little is known of the Orcades from that time until the convulsions in Norway, which ended in the elevation of Harold 'the Fair-Haired,' to the undivided sovereignty of that country. About the middle of the ninth century Kenneth Macalpin obtained possession of the islands, and they continued with the Scottish throne until the end of the eleventh century, when they were assigned by King Donald Bane to the King of Norway, to whom they were subject until the middle of the thirteenth century, when they were again transferred by Magnus, King of Norway, to Alexander, King of Scotland; but, although these islands were thus ceded, the Norwegians still asserted their right to them, until the year 1470, when James III of Scotland married Margaret, daughter of the king of Denmark, with whom they again passed, in lieu of her dowry, to the crown of Scotland; and upon the birth of her son, James IV, they were finally ceded, which was afterwards confirmed when James IV of Scotland married Ann, daughter of the King of Denmark. Subsequent to this period the islands passed into the possession of the English Crown, and were bestowed by Charles I, and afterwards by Charles II, on the Morton family; in 1776 Lord Morton sold them to Sir Lawrence Dundas, and they have since remained in the family of his descendant. Having been so long and so repeatedly in the possession of the Danes and Norwegians, many names of persons as well as places are derived from the Danish or Scandinavian language. It will be comprehended that the Orcadians bear no resemblance whatever to the Celtic Highlanders, in language, dress, appearance, or customs. The whole body of the inhabitants may be divided into three classes: the first consists of the gentry, or proprietors of land, with such as have gained a competent fortune by means of industry; the second is formed of those who are denominated tradesmen and shopkeepers; and the third comprises fishermen, and others for the most part employed in the cultivation of the soil, and are either farmers with servants, or what are termed cottars or cottagers. Orkney has given birth to some individuals who have attained to eminence in science, literature, and the arts; of these we may particularly allude to Malcolm Laing, Esq., author of a well known History of Scotland, and Mrs. Brunton, authoress of 'Self-Control,' &c.

SOIL, PRODUCE, CLIMATE, &c.—Compared with the sterile wilds in some of the sister islands to the north, or even with the lofty hills and bleak marshy plains to the south of them, these isles gain so much that their appearance is favourable and inviting; to the eye their surface presents a rich and pleasing variety. It is conjectured by some (and there are circumstances which strongly tend to corroborate the conjecture) that these islands were, at some distant period, part of the main land of Scotland. The hills composing the ridge that skirts the Western Ocean, as well as those that intersect the Mainland, and occupy some of the other islands, are seldom single and detached, but for the most part are formed into ridges of some extent, with small intervening valleys; and their tops instead of rising high into a conical form, are generally either flat or rounded. Some few of them are almost entirely covered with verdure; the bottoms of most of them consist of corn fields, interspersed with patches of rich old grass, affording excellent feeding for cattle; the soil is composed of sandy or clay loam: their sides produce an admirable mixture of heath and grass for sheep pasture, on a thin stratum of peat moss; while their tops are usually brown, on a bottom of peat moss, clay or gravel. There are spots on some of them delightfully romantic, where the attention is arrested and the ear pleased by the murmurs of the rills, and the eye feasted on flowers that shed their fragrance around. But what is of much more consequence, Providence, ever bountiful in adding to the comforts of man, has, with no sparing hand, spread peat moss over a considerable portion of these islands. The ancient rude modes of cultivation are now abandoned, and the implements of husbandry have been materially improved; but much of the land under tillage is not regularly fenced, nor divided into separate fields: the spirit of improvement is now, however, generally diffused throughout the islands, and regular enclosures are becoming more frequent. The grain almost exclusively cultivated in Orkney is either oats and beans, or an inferior sort of barley. The herring fishery is considerable, the principal 'stations' are Papa Stronsay, Deersound, Holm, Burray, and South Ronaldshay. The markets are Ireland, Scotland, and England; a few only being sent abroad direct from Orkney, except the produce of the early fishery, which is carried on in the neighbourhood of Stromness—and from that place the herrings are despatched direct to Hamburgh. The cod and ling fisheries are also prosecuted, by various descriptions of craft, from almost all the islands, and the quantity taken increases. CLIMATE.—Throughout the whole of the islands, rain falls in considerable quantity, especially on the western coasts: and it is supposed that the annual amount showered upon these islands averages twenty-six inches. Snows are neither so frequent nor so heavy; but they come with comparative violence, and generally form the north-west and south-east; but though what falls in the course of a year may not be much short of the quantity in other northern latitudes, it continues only a few days at a time on the surface of the earth. A peculiarity of the climate, with respect to the season of snow and hail, merits some attention:—some part of the month of June, which in Britain is well known to be of a pleasant and genial warmth, is here not only colder than the preceding months, but almost as much so as any month in winter: for two weeks, and even sometimes more, about the middle of June, the wind blows from the north, strong and piercing, accompanied with snow and hail showers; but as soon as that period is past, the wind veers round, and warm showers succeed.

According to a survey taken by Mr. Murdo Mackenzie, in 1750, the whole number of islands under the denomination of the Orkneys amounted to sixty-seven, of which the following twenty-nine only are inhabited:—Mainland (or Pomona), Græmsay, Hoy, Waas, Rassa, Fara, Cava, Flota, South Ronaldshay, Swaney, Pentland Skerry, Burray, Lambholm, Copinsay, Shapinshay, Stronsay, Papa Stronsay, Edey, Fairey, Sandey, North Ronaldshay, Westray, Papa Westray, Egilshay, Rousay, Weir, Enhallow, Gairsay, and Damsay; the remaining thirty-eight, which in the primitive language of the country are termed 'holms,' are much inferior in size, and solely appropriated to pasturage. The Orkneys comprise twenty-six parishes; the only two towns are Kirkwall, which is the capital and a royal burgh, and Stromness, a burgh of Barony. The isles of Orkney and Shetland form one sheriffdom or stewartry; the duty is principally performed by the sheriff-depute, whose authority extends over all, whilst that of the sheriff-substitute is confined to Shetland. Combined they form one county, under the title of the County of Orkney and Shetland, which returns one member to the imperial parliament. Kirkwall, the capital of the Orkneys, is a representative burgh, joining with Wick, Dornoch, Dingwall, Tain, and Cromarty, in sending another member.

* What is known as the 'MAINLAND' is the largest of the Orkney Isles.

The annual value of Real Property in the Orkney and Shetland Isles, as assessed to the Poor Rates in 1815, amounted to £12,479; and the amount assessed to the Property and Income Tax in 1849, was £10,054.

KIRKWALL AND ITS VICINAGE.

KIRKWALL, the capital of the Orkney Islands and of the united parishes of Kirkwall and Saint Ola, is a town of great antiquity, a royal burgh, and the seat of a synod and presbytery: 353 miles from Edinburgh by land, and 241 by steam navigation; 58 from Wick, 54 from Thurso, 41 from Huna Ferry (the most northerly part of Great Britain), and 14 from Stromness; situated about the centre of an island, called, by way of pre-eminence, Mainland, or Pomona, and on the south-east of the bay of Kirkwall. The town bears strong characteristics of antiquity: the principal street is exceedingly inconvenient from its narrowness, being in some places barely wide enough to afford passage or a cart; the houses are generally arranged with their ends or gables towards the street, which gives the town a singular if not an awkward appearance; many of these houses, too, both externally and internally, present striking features of old age—the doors and windows are small, the walls of great thickness, and the apartments narrow and gloomy; the modern dwellings, however, form an exception to this style, and many of them vie with the most commodious habitations of any other place of the same extent in Scotland. The town is divided into two parts, respectively termed the Old Town and the New Town: the former bends along the bay, while the latter stretches a considerable way to the southward. A rivulet, which is crossed by a stone bridge of one arch, passes through the town. The most conspicuous building in Kirkwall is the Cathedral of Saint Magnus, which majestically lifts its head, and excites the admiration of every stranger; it was founded by Ronald, Count of Orkney, in 1138, in honour of and dedicated to his uncle, Saint Magnus; and, though the work of different ages, and brought to completion under various superintendences, must be admitted to be an edifice, not only grand and simple, but also surprisingly regular and uniform—and is certainly a most imposing ornament and object of pride to these northern islands. A short distance from the cathedral, is a large and handsome church belonging to the United Presbyterians, and near it is the Free church. There is also a Congregational Church. The ancient church of St. Ola, which it is believed existed prior to the foundation of that of St. Magnus, and was then the only religious establishment, stood near the shore of the road or bay of Kirkwall: around its site many of the houses are of such very antiquated appearance and construction as to allow of the conjecture that these dwellings, from their situation, originally obtained the appellation of Kirkiovog, or the 'Kirk on the bay,' subsequently corrupted (or perhaps merely) altered to Kirkwall. Opposite the cathedral, on the west side of the street, are the ruins of a fortress, called 'the King's Castle,' which time and the havoc of war have nearly levelled with the dust; it was a place of considerable strength in 1581, when, or soon after, it was occupied by the infamous Earl of Orkney, natural son of James V. Almost adjoining to the dilapidated fragments of this fortress stand the much more interesting and ancient remains of the bishop's palace.

Kirkwall was created a royal burgh in the first instance by James III., and its charter was renewed by James V.; its government is confided to a provost, two baillies, a treasurer, a dean of guild, and seven councillors: it is a representative burgh, and unites with Tain, Wick, Dornoch, Dingwall, and Cromarty, in returning one member to parliament. The Town Hall is a convenient building, supported on pillars, forming a piazza in front; the first story is divided into apartments for a common prison, the second for an assembly hall and courts of justice, with a large room adjoining for the council meetings. The quarter sessions are held on the first Wednesdays in January, April, July, and October; the sheriff's court is open every Thursday during the sitting of the supreme court, and oftener when necessary. The sheriff's and commissary courts are held in Kirkwall, the synod of Orkney holds its meetings here, and the sheriff's small debts court is held weekly.

The harbour of Kirkwall is safe and commodious; it has two excellent piers, and the outer bay affords good anchorage ground; altogether the situation of the place is well adapted for the resort of shipping. The town is supplied with coals principally from Newcastle. The making of kelp occupies many persons, and the trade in timber is of some consequence. There are three branch banking establishments; and an hotel (Snowie's), a very respectable and comfortable house. Kirkwall sustains several educational establishments, including an academy or grammar school, and others on charitable foundation or instituted by societies. The Orkney hospital, a remedial institution, was founded by John Balfour, Esq, of Trenabie, for the relief of the sick, and as an asylum for a certain number of aged, infirm persons, and they are attended gratuitously by the faculty of Kirkwall. The Kirkwall fair at one time was famed for the extent of business and the number of merchants and others attending, from various distant places, and it has been compared to the celebrated Leipsic fair on a smaller scale. It is held on the first Tuesday after the 11th of August, and continues during that week and the one succeeding; but the business transacted is now comparatively trifling. There is also a horse and cattle market held on the first Monday in every month, at which there is a considerable amount of business transacted.

STROMNESS

Is a burgh of barony and sea-port, 14 miles from Kirkwall, situate as that town is, on the mainland (or Pomona Island) of the Orkneys, adjoining the sound of Hoy, opposite Græmsay island. This place, which has risen within the last century from being a fishing hamlet, composed of a few scattered huts, to a populous town, owes its increase to its admirable harbour and convenient position, by which it is rendered a place of safe resort, in these stormy seas, to vessels of all nations trading with the north of the eastern or western hemispheres. Its harbour is, indeed, a great attraction. This fine natural basin, extending from south to north more than a mile, is sheltered from the Atlantic on the west by a high ridge of moorish ground the southern extremity of which forms the north side of Hoy Sound; while its entrance is protected partly by the green island of Græmsay, which lies midway in the sound, and partly by a ness or point of land that stretches out from the westward and covers it from the force of tide and tempest in Hoy Sound. On the east side it is defended by two small islands or holms which extend along the back of it; and even beyond these, in a sort of outer harbour or roadstead, there is excellent anchorage for shipping. It was formerly no uncommon thing in the spring months to see in these havens upwards of fifty large vessels, on their way to the whale fishery in Davis Straits and off to Greenland: they called here for the purpose of completing their complement of men, which was generally about twenty for each ship; in some years there were upwards of seven hundred men furnished from this port to Davis's Straits, besides one hundred and fifty apprentices: these are now altogether reduced to about one hundred and fifty men and boys. About five hundred men are engaged in the herring fishery, and employed by the Hudson's Bay Company, who have a resident agent. In this harbour captains may be supplied with necessaries to prosecute their voyage; and for repairs of vessels the most efficient and expeditious means are afforded by a new patent slip; to Mr. Stanger the port is indebted for this important additional accommodation: the machinery of the slip is of the most substantial description, and by its mechanical power a ship of seven hundred tons can be taken into the yard. A very extensive warehouse has been erected at the north end of the town; and there is an excellent pier, with eigteen feet of water at spring tides. Boat and ship building is carried on, and straw plat of superior quality was extensively manufactured here some years back, and the prize medal was awarded for this article at the Great Exhibition of 1851 to Mr. John Rendall, of this town; of late years little has been done in this branch of business. A branch of the National Bank of Scotland is established here, and there are two principal inns—the Commercial Hotel is of a superior class affording excellent accommodation.

Stromness is a very irregular built town; the habitations have been erected without any regard to uniformity or arrangement, generally as near the sea as possible; some are even within flood mark, and protected by bulwarks, quays and jetties, which each individual appears to have constructed as suited his own convenience and taste. This range of buildings forms a narrow street, never exceeding twelve feet in width, and in many places much narrower; it runs in a zigzag direction, and is ill paved with flag-stones of unequal sizes, but repairs and improvements are being made in this respect on a liberal scale. Stromness is an independent burgh or barony by a charter held from the crown, granted in 1817, when the government was vested in two baillies and nine councillors. The market day is Wednesday; there is an annual fair held on the first Tuesday in September, which continues for a week; there are also cattle markets or fairs on the last Wednesday in every month, excepting November, December and January.

POST OFFICE, Stromness, Elizabeth Sinclair, Post Mistress.—Letters arrive from and are despatched to all parts (Sunday excepted), every day during Summer, and every alternate day during Winter (weather permitting).

THE SHETLAND ISLES,

OR ZETLAND ISLES—a group of islands, islets, and rocks, situated in the Northern Ocean, about fifteen leagues north-east of the Orkneys, and forty-four west of Bergen, in Norway; lying between 50° 48′ 30″, and 60° 52′, north latitude, and between 1° 52′ and 1° 57′ west longitude from London. By a statistical table of Scotland it appears that, of the eight hundred and fifty-five square miles of land in Shetland, there were, about forty years since, twenty-one thousand, eight hundred and eighty-eight acres cultivated, and five hundred and twenty five thousand, three hundred and twelve acres of hills, mosses, &c.; or a proportion of four acres in the hundred under tillage; the proportion of the latter has however greatly increased. There are three principal islands in the group, namely, Mainland, Yell (on the north), and (still farther north-east) Unst; on the east of Yell lies Fetlar, which is the largest of the inferior islands; the lochs of which, are famous for trout, and several of the other islands abound with seals, otters, and wild fowl. The next island in point of size is Bressey; the smaller ones are Whalray, Out Skerries, Samphray, Big Island, Mickle Roe, Papa Stour, House, Barray, Trondray, besides a great number of islets, holms, and skerries. The history of Shetland is so much involved in that of Orkney, as to render an enlarged notice of its early ages unnecessary. That the Romans visited the coasts of Shetland is highly probable, from the coins of that people which have been discovered—those are of Galba, Vespasian, Trajan, and Ælius Cæsar; and the remains of a small Roman camp are to be traced on the island of Fetlar. There seems to be little doubt but these islands were first inhabited by the Norwegians, the laws having been administered by 'udallers,' who acted as a sort of petty princes. In the year 875, Harold Harfager, or the 'Fair-haired,' subdued these islands, and gave them to Count Sigurd, who was the first Earl of Orkney, from whom sprang the true Scandinavian dynasty of the Earls of Orkney and Shetland—the latter country being at first too insignificant to be included in the title, although it was included in the grant. On the accession of the Zetland Isles to the Scottish crown, the laws of the former were gradually encroached upon by the oppressive endeavours of the Scotch earls to introduce feudal subjection and seigniorage, in place of the ancient udal tenures. From 1468, when a marriage was concerted between the Scottish monarch, James III, and the Princess of Denmark (when Orkney and Shetland were pledged to the royal husband), to the time when the two countries passed to the English crown, in the persons of Charles I and II, and afterwards to the Earl of Morton (who sold the estate to Sir Lawrence Dundas), nothing occurs relating to the possession of Shetland distinct from that which has been already noticed in Orkney. Of its derivative we are informed that Shetland was first named Hialtlandia—and hence arose Yeltaland; another name was Hetland, signifying 'the high' or 'lofty land;' and from this word, according to the Norwegian writers, the name of 'Shetland' or 'Zetland' was obtained.

SOIL, PRODUCE, &c.—The general aspect of the country is bleak and barren; and although there is but little to attract in the form of landscape, in what may be called the interior of the islands—the whole of them being destitute of wood—yet their coast scenery presents views of a highly interesting character; and the summer tourist, who may be content to leave behind him for a while the rich luxuriance of an English landscape (to which his eye has, perhaps, been long familiarised), and take a peep at nature in her more wild and romantic guise, will find, in the diversified appearance and picturesque grandeur of the coast of Shetland, ample gratification. In the summer of 1836, a fine powerful steam-packet, which was put on the Leith, Aberdeen, Caithness, and Orkney station, made a few experimental trips once a fortnight to Shetland. A beautiful vessel now plies weekly during the summer. The want of roads has been much felt by the inhabitants of Shetland, but government is now proceeding to remedy this inconvenience, by constructing roads between the principal inhabited parts; and where this means of communication does not exist, boats are called into use on the numerous fine 'voes' which penetrate far into the interior: in travelling by land, the small ponies, or 'shelties' as they are called, pursue their way across the wastes without much difficulty. The cattle of Shetland are of a very diminutive breed: a cow is said to weigh from two to three hundred weight upon an average; an ox from three to four, but seldom exceeding five hundred weight. A great abundance of poultry is kept on almost every farm, and small swine are very numerous. The sheep are very small, but produce wool of an excellent quality, which is knit into stockings, gloves and mits: the fleece, which is remarkably soft, has been wrought into stockings of a fine texture. The precarious and scanty corn-harvest of Shetland is rarely finished until the end of October or even of November. The fuel in general use is peat, the cutting and drying of which occupies diligent attention. The highest land in these islands is Roeness Hill, which attains an elevation of one thousand, four hundred and forty-seven feet; the Hill of Foula is next in altitude, being about one thousand, three hundred feet above the level of the sea. The chief support of the Zetlander is dependent on the white-fishery—herring, cod, and ling abounding on these coasts; besides which, many men and boys are employed every season in the Davis's Straits whale fishery, in vessels fitted out in England and Scotland, who call here to complete their crews, and who reland them on their return from their perilous occupation. Several persons are also engaged in angling for the small fry of the coal-fish, or gadus carbonarius—known in Shetland by the name of 'sethe;' these swarm in myriads within the numerous creeks and sounds of this northern archipelago: they first appear in May, scarcely more than an inch long; about August they become abundant, measuring about eight inches in length; and in the early part of the following year they attain the ordinary size of the cod-fish: a profitable fishery then takes place, in deep tide-ways, under the term of 'sethes,' supplying the inhabitants with a portion of food and oil from the livers, for light and other purposes.

The Shetland Isles form twelve parochial divisions, composing two presbyteries and a synod. The only town in this portion of the northern group is Lerwick—besides it, there are only a few villages and hamlets on the shores. The islands now pay their proportion of the land-tax, and in every other respect have become subject to British laws; they are represented in parliament (as already noticed) in connexion with the Orkneys, to which sheriffdom they belong.

LERWICK, SCALLOWAY AND THEIR VICINAGES.

LERWICK, the principal town in Shetland, is (by steam navigation) 272 miles from Edinburgh, 166 from Peterhead (Aberdeenshire), 126 from Wick, and 95 from Kirkwall; situated on the east coast of Mainland, or largest island of the group. It bears the name of the bay on whose margin it is built; and that, in its turn, derives its name from a long, narrow inlet on the opposite shore of the island of Bressay, called Lera-voe, and remarkable for its extensive deposit of clay and mud; a projecting point at the entrance to Lera-voe is called Lera-ness: and the whole bay, including the roadstead of Bressay sound, is named Lerwick, which signifies the 'bay of clay,' or 'mud'—compounded of Islandic leir, Danish leer (clay, mud), and Suio-Gothic wik, Danish vig, viig (an arm of the sea, an anchorage). The site of the town, comprising a lunated segment of the sea shore of nearly half a mile in length, and becoming gradually more elevated as it recedes from the coastline, presents the appearance of a perfect amphitheatre, and, when viewed from the opposite anchorage, the effect is singularly picturesque. The principal street extends through the whole length of the town, following the curvature of the sea shore; and numerous lanes or closes, constructed at right angles with it, lead to spacious road, or half-formed street, on the eminence above the town. The houses are built of a species of grey sandstone, which abounds in the immediate vicinity, and which is both of considerable beauty and great durability; and in general they are far superior to those of the sister town of Kirkwall, in Orkney; but here, as in Kirkwall, the houses (with the exception of those very recently erected) seem to have dropped by accident into their respective localities—their owners having apparently being indifferent whether fronts or backs, gables or corners, were planted towards the street; in several places, also, the buildings project so far into the main street, that there is scarcely room for a wheel carriage to pass: it is gratifying, however, to perceive, and it is creditable to the present municipal rulers of the burgh, that all the more offensive of these obstructions are in course of being removed. The principal public buildings are the town-house, Fort Charlotte, the parish and other churches, and the subscription rooms: the first of these is an old structure, containing a hall for the meeting of the commissioners of supply (also used as a masonic lodge. Fort Charlotte stands on a rocky eminence at the northern extremity of the town; its guns command the whole range of the anchorage, from the south to the north entrance of the harbour. It was originally built in the reign of Charles II.; but having been dismantled and allowed to fall into a state of dilapidation, it was re-built in 1781, and then received its present name in honour of the consort of George III. It is said to be of strength sufficient to protect the town against a small squadron of frigates; at present a bombadier has charge of the works and stores. In a part of the barracks is held the sheriff court, and a part also is used as the county gaol.

The parish church stands above the town, towards its southern extremity; it is a substantial building, with a Doric front of hewn stone; but, in consequence of the flatness of its roof and the want of a spire, its external appearance is somewhat ponderous: internally, however, it is both tastefully and commodiously fitted up. The Free church, situated contiguously, is a handsome modern building, neatly fitted up. There are several other places of worship—substantial and commodious structures, of which a list is appended with their ministers. The subscription rooms, which are in the centre of the town, and occupy the site of the old church, besides various smaller apartments, contains three rooms of thirty feet by twenty, two of which are occupied as school-rooms, and the other is a public reading-room or news-room, where respectable strangers have the privilege of reading newspapers, and other publications.

Lerwick is a burgh of barony, having its municipal government vested in two baillies and nine councillors, with a separate board of police, all of whom are elected by the burgesses. A baillie court is held every Thursday, and more frequently if occasion requires, for settling small debt cases, and for taking cognisance of police offences; the sheriff-court sits every Thursday, except during the recess; and the justices of the peace, the commissioners of supply, and the provincial synod of Shetland also hold their meetings in Lerwick. The trade of this town is much more extensive than the amount of its population would indicate. There are shops in almost all the houses on both sides of the principal street; and the mercantile business which is transacted in some of the establishments here would be considered important in many a city in the kingdom. Almost the whole produce of Shetland, consisting of salted fish, beef, oil, butter, and hosiery, passes to market through the merchants of Lerwick; and, in like manner, by them are imported nearly all the groceries, spirits, and manufactured goods used throughout the islands. Lerwick registers about seventy vessels in the port, of the aggregate burthen of about 2,000 tons. Two schooners, having comfortable accommodation for passengers, are statedly employed in trade between Lerwick and Leith; a mail packet plies weekly between the former places during the summer months, touching at Aberdeen, Wick and Kirkwall. The harbour of Lerwick (or Bressay sound, as it is frequently called), is one of the most spacious, secure and commodious havens in the British empire: it is bounded on the east by the island of Bressay, and on the west by Mainland, having an entrance from the south, and another from the north; its extent may be inferred from the fact that, on more than one occasion, a fleet of upwards of ninety sail of war ships has anchored in it, and found ample space for getting under weigh. A branch of the Union Bank of Scotland is in operation here.

SCALLOWAY is a sea-port village, in the parish of Tingwall, eight miles from Lerwick; situated on the north side of a fine bay on the west side of Mainland. Anciently this was the capital of Shetland; but in proportion as Lerwick has increased in importance, Scalloway has retrograded. Near the village are the ruins of Scallow castle, erected in 1600 by Patrick Stewart, the tyrannical Earl of Orkney and Shetland. The inhabitants chiefly subsist by the herring fishery; and for facilitating the pursuit of this branch there is a large quay and extensive warehouses, cooperage, &c. In the spring of the year 'haaf' fishing for cod and ling is also successfully resorted to. The men of Scalloway are of a very fearless character, and frequently put to sea in such boisterous and stormy weather as would deter the most experienced and intrepid seamen of other quarters: they are also a very industrious and persevering race; some of them have feued ground, and have erected houses for themselves.

The parish church stands three miles from the village, at the head of a fine fresh-water loch; but to obviate partially this inconvenience the Rev. John Turnbull, the respected minister, has erected at his own expense a neat chapel of ease in the village. On the west shore is a spring of very excellent water; the quantity discharged is constant and abundant, and is uninfluenced either by wet or dry seasons, it is covered by the sea at high water. Not far distant is 'Gallows Hill,' so called from its having formerly been the place of execution for criminals; the last who suffered on the spot are said to have been two unfortunate females, who fell a sacrifice to ignorance and superstition, in the seventeeth century, for the alleged crime of witchcraft.

PEEBLES-SHIRE.

OR TWEEDALE, a county in the southern part of Scotland, is bounded on the north and north-east by Edinburghshire, on the east and south-east by Selkirkshire, on the south by Dumfries-shire, and on the west by the county of Lanark, for almost the whole extent of its western border. In length, from its southern border to its extreme northern apex, it measures full thirty miles; from west to east, including the parts on the latter boundary that mingle with Selkirkshire, its breadth is upwards of twenty miles, whilst in the other parts it varies from ten to fifteen miles. Its form is exceedingly irregular, and the contents of its area have been variously computed. About three hundred and thirty-eight square miles, or two hundred and sixteen thousand three hundred and twenty acres, may be taken as he nearest estimate of its superfices; the government returns of 1851, state the area of square miles tor be three hundred and fifty four. According to a statement made in 1821, it appears that, of three hundred and twelve square miles, there were twenty seven thousand acres in cultivation, and of hills, mosses and moors there were one hundred and seventy-seven thousand one hundred and sixty acres.

NAME AND EARLY HISTORY.—The shire derives its present title from the name of the county town, and Tweedale, or Tweed-dale, from being the district in which the Tweed has its source, and the vale through which it pursues its course to the east. The Gadenii tribe of Britons, who inhabited this secluded territory on the Tweed, have left innumerable traces of their residence, demonstrated in the names of places, druidic and warlike remains, and sepulchral tumuli. The Romans were the first people who broke in upon the British aborigines in the district: after the abdication of the Roman power, the Gadenii naturally associated with the kindred Britons of Strathclyde; and the decendants of those early settlers continued here throughout the Pictish period, and until the fortune of the Scottish kings prevailed in 974. From the epoch of the migration of the Strathclyde Britons, in the ninth century, the Scoto-Irish intermingled with the remaining Britons on the Upper Tweed. The next and last class of intruders on the district were the Anglo-Saxons from Lothian, who ultimately prevailed, and finally established a permanent settlement in the shire: one of the chiefs of this people, called Eadulph, settled in the vale of Edleston water, to which, with the village, he communicated his name; in this manner those of Saxon lineage founded the families of rank in Peebles-shire. At different times the county suffered in a small degree from the inroads of marauders from the English side of the borders, a circumstance which had the effect of keeping the people long in the exercise and possession of warlike weapons. At Philiphaugh, some of the heads of the best families fell, or were taken prisoners, fighting on the side of royalty: but in the insurrection of 1679, in the west of Scotland, which was ended by the battle of Bothwell Bridge, there were not a dozen persons natives of Tweedale. Since these stirring events, neither the county nor its inhabitants have been in any way prominent in the scenes of history.

SURFACE, SOIL, PRODUCE, &c.—The county is an uninterrupted series of hill and mountain ranges, so close upon each other that there is scarcely to be found a plain of moderate dimensions in the district, and not one of any kind unless upon the margin of the Tweed or its tributaries. Notwithstanding the attempts made by several individuals to encourage new and better modes of agriculture, it is certain that till within the last sixty years the management of arable farms was in a deplorably low condition; but, within the last forty years, particularly, draining, ploughing, and planting have been carried on most effectually, and the general features of the country highly improved. The sides and summits of the hills are, at the present time, here and there clothed with exuberant plantations; and the great vale of the district, and its minor valleys, are now well cultivated, enclosed, and divided: rich arable fields have taken the place of unproductive swamps, and are rapidly advancing up the sides of the hills. The elevations, for so small a county, are very numerous, and some of them are of considerable altitude; the following are the most conspicuous in height above the level of the sea:—Hartfield, 2,916 feet; Broad Law, 2,850; Dollar Law, 2,840; Scrape, 2,560; Gums Cleugh, 2,200; Dundroich, Pyketstane, and Hell's Cleugh, each 2,100; Cardon, 2,000; Cairn Hill, 1,800; Broughton Heights, 1,483, and Meigle, 1,480. It appears that thirty-five years ago, the amount of stock in the shire was 1,126 horses, 5,060, cattle, and 112,800, sheep: since that period the numbers have greatly increased. Little can be said of the minerals of the county. At the north-east extremity of the shire coal is found, but at too great a distance to be of advantage to the general population; the county is in the same predicament as to freestone, and the houses are nearly all built of blue whinstone. At Stobo there is a valuable quarry of blue slate; limestone and marl are plentiful; and ironstone is found in some parts of the district. Peebles-shire is almost devoid of manufactures of almost every description, except at Peebles and Innerleithen, where there are several mills for the manufacture of tweeds and shawls; it is remarkable that there is so little manufacturing industry displayed, when it is considered what a superiority the district possesses in the purity and fall of its waters, which make it altogether a most advantageous site for the establishment of paper and spinning mills, as well as general manufactories.

RIVERS, LAKES, AND RAILWAYS.—The principal river is the Tweed, distinguished as the fourth of Scottish streams: the upper sources of this beautiful water are found in the parish of Tweedsmuir, in this county; it is enriched by many tributaries, and, after passing the ancient town of Berwick, falls into the German Ocean. The other rivers are the Lyne, the Leithen, and the Manow, all of which are subsidiary to the Tweed—and the Leggett, which runs into St. Mary's Loch, in Selkirkshire. In the rivers and small lakes there are abundance of salmon and trout, and a lake called the 'West Water Loch' is noted for the quantity of eels with which it swarms. There is a line of rail from Peebles to Edinburgh, and a branch of the Caledonian line is in course of construction from Broughton to Biggar, and from thence to Symington, where it will join the main line.

DIVISIONS, REPRESENTATION &c.—When the country began to be divided into sheriffdoms, about the twelfth century, Tweedale was put under the jurisdiction of two sheriffs, of whom one was settled at Traquair, the other at Peebles. Peebles-shire from its connection with the ancient kingdom of Strathclyde, became naturally a part of the diocess of Glasgow, in which it continued till the dissolution of Episcopacy. The shire now comprises fourteen parishes, and two parts of parishes: it contains one royal burgh—Peebles, but possesses no representative burgh; the county at large, however, returns one member to the imperial parliament.

INNERLEITHEN AND TRAQUAIR.

INNERLEITHEN (or Inverleithen), is a parish and village—the latter respectable and pleasant, is 28 miles S. from Edinburgh, 16 N. W. from Selkirk, 12 W. from Galashiels, and 6 E. from Peebles, situated near the mouth of the Leithen, within a quarter of a mile of the left bank of the Tweed, and environed on the east and west by high and partly wooded hills. Upon the banks of the Leithen are several large woollen manufactories, the powerful machinery of which is propelled by the stream, and the works employ a considerable number of hands. Tweeds, shawls, and tartans are here made in great perfection. The celebrity and some of the prosperity of the village, are derived from the number of visitors, who resort hither to a salubrious mineral spring, possessing properties similar in effect to the waters of Harrogate, and found eminently beneficial in cases of scrofulous disorders, inflammations of the eyes, and various diseases originating in impurity of the blood. The spring is much frequented in the summer, particularly by families from Edinburgh, for whose accommodation a number of substantial houses have been built, forming a neat small street along the public road, with a variety of houses behind, let as private furnished lodgings. A well-house was erected in 1826, containing subscription reading rooms, which are supplied with newspapers, and a select library; and there is a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland, and a savings' bank. The village, which has been improving of late years, is now well lighted with gas. Additional celebrity has been imparted to this place by Sir Walter Scott, in the publication of his novel called 'St. Ronan's Well,' of which this spot is supposed to be the scene. An excellent inn here has adopted the title of the novel. Not many years since an association was instituted, styled the 'St. Ronan's Border Club': it is composed of a great number of gentlemen connected with all parts of the country, under whose auspices is held an annual festival for the exhibition of olympic and border games, and gymnastic exercises. The day of competition is usually in August.

The places of worship are Established and Free churches—one of each, a Presbyterian Chapel; and one for Independents. There are schools in connection with the churches.

TRAQUAIR is a parish on the south bank of the Tweed, and watered also by the river Quair; it lies opposite to Innerleithen, with which place a communication has been opened by means of a wooden bridge thrown across the Tweed. The general appearance of the parish is mountainous, in it are Gumscleugh and Minchmoor, lofty eminences, lying on the road to Selkirk. The old mansion house of Traquair is delightfully situated on the banks of the Tweed, where that river and the Quair unite; and on the side of the hill overlooking the lawn is 'the Bush aboon Traquair,' (the subject of the celebrated ballad), pointed out by a few birch trees, the remains of a thicket or arbour, once the seat of pastoral love. There is an Established church and a chapel for Roman Catholics.

POST OFFICE, INNERLEITHEN, Robert Procter, Post Master.—Letters from all parts arrive (from PEEBLES) at twenty minutes before one noon, and evening at seven, and are despatched at a quarter before seven in the morning, and evening at seven.

Money Orders are granted and paid from nine in the morning until six in the evening.

LINTON,

NEWLANDS, NOBLEHOUSE, ROMANNO BRIDGE, CARLOPS, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

LINTON, or, WEST LINTON, as it is sometimes called, to distinguish it from East Linton, in Haddingtonshire, is a parish and village—the latter, which is irregularly built, and without the attractions or interest of trade or manufactures, is 16 miles S.S.W. from Edinburgh, 14 N.W. from Peebles, and 11 N.N.E. from Biggar; situated at the conflux of the Lyne and Tweed rivers. Besides these streams, the parish is watered by the North Esk; and although the greater part of the district is hilly, yet it is fertile, and famed for its excellent sheep pasturage, and the village has long been noted for its large sheep markets in June. A church of the Establishment, one for a congregation of United Presbyterians, and one for Episcopalians, are the places of worship. Linton confers the title of baron upon the family of Traquair.

NEWLANDS is a parish lying between Linton and Edleston, watered by the Lyne and a small tributary stream, called the Tarth. The surface is diversified with hill and dale, and the hills are mostly green without heath. Trees thrive in every part of the parish, and the greater part is enclosed by hedgerows and fences. The parish church, a small but neat edifice, is situated on the left bank of the Lyne water; and at the confluence of that stream with the Tarth stand the ruins of Drochil castle, once a large structure partly erected by the Regent Morton, and left unfinished when he was put to death on the scaffold by the Scottish maiden or guillotine.

NOBLEHOUSE, in Newlands parish, was formerly known by an inn in which the trustees of the turnpike roads used to assemble—these meetings being now transferred to the county hall, Peebles. The seat of ROMANNO, in the parish, was at the end of the seventeenth century the property and residence of Dr. Alexander Pennycuick, the author of some clever poems, and of a poetical 'Description of Tweeddale,' a district of which he was a native.

CARLOPS, likewise in Newlands parish, is a small village, situate on the northern verge of the county, about two miles from Newlands. It originated in the year 1784, and takes its name from some localities in the neighbourhood called 'Carlings loups,' in allusion to a witch, or carling, who, it is said, 'kept the country side in fear' in those parts: and whose traditionary character, it is asserted, furnished to Ramsay the idea of 'Manse,' in his pastoral of the 'Gentle Shepherd.'

POST OFFICE, LINTON, Archibald Alexander, Post Master.—Letters arrive from all parts every morning at half-past eleven; and are despatched thereto every afternoon at a quarter-past two.

PEEBLES,

WITH THE PARISHES AND VILLAGES OF EDLESTON, BROUGHTON, GLENHOLM, KILBUCHO, DRUMMELZIER, KIRKURD, LYNE AND MEGGET, MANOR, SKIRLING, STOBO, TWEEDSMUIR, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

PEEBLES is an ancient royal burgh, the capital of its county and parish, and the seat of a presbytery; 22 miles s. from Edinburgh, the same distance w. by N. from Selkirk, 54 N.N.E. from Dumfries, and 47 E. by s. from Glasgow. It is situate in the centre of its parish, on a beautiful and large plain, having the Tweed running along its southern side, and the Peebles (or Edleston) water along its northern limit; surrounded by an amphitheatre of hills, and its vicinage is adorned by numerous thriving plantations and elegant mansions. Amongst the latter, King's Meadow, Kerfield, Venlaw, and Rosetta are the most conspicuous as modern seats. Sir Adam Hay, Bart., of Haystoun and King's Meadow, who is principal proprietor of the parish, has thrown over the Tweed, in a romantic glen about a mile below the town, an elegant wire bridge, which is much admired. The name of the town has been spelt several ways, at different periods—Peblys, Peblis, and Peeblis—and the present orthography is of no older date than the last century.

For a long period Peebles has consisted of two towns, respectively called New and Old: the former occupies the ridge of a peninsula projected westward along the northern side of the Edleston before mentioned, over which is a bridge forming a communication with the old town, which lies on the face of sloping ground. The Edleston water, by a bend round the head of the peninsula, falls into the Tweed, over which there is another bridge of five arches, lately widened and greatly improved. The town is neat and clean, and the streets and principal shops are lighted with gas by a joint-stock company. Since the opening of the railway between this place and Edinburgh, a vast number of visitors from thence and more distant places, have made this place their residence in summer, and this has materially assisted to promote its prosperity; some very tasteful villas have lately been erected for private residence, as well as to accommodate the numerous visitors; the railway company offer inducements to parties building for residence here by granting free tickets. Of the public buildings independent of those for divine worship, the most conspicuous either in respect to magnitude or architectural prominence, are the county and town halls, in which assemblies and other meetings are held, and the public schools. As a town profitting by manufactures or external trade, Peebles takes a station inferior to many towns of less magnitude, and not so happily favoured by situation. Formerly the manufacture of woollens and serges was carried on here to some extent, and at the beginning of the present century that of fine cotton cloths was introduced; but these branches have gone to decay. There are mills for grinding flour and meal, propelled by water from the Tweed; a brewery, a tannery, a woollen mill, and two principal inns. The Bank of Scotland, British Linen Company's Bank, and the Union Bank of Scotland have each a branch here; and there is a savings' bank. Two newspapers are published here monthly, the 'Peebleshire Advertiser,' and the 'Peebles County Newspaper,' and have an extensive circulation; the business of letterpress printing is carried on by Mr. Clark in High street.

The Chambers Institution is a fine building in High street, containing a library of 13,000 volumes, a reading room, museum or gallery of art, comprising many rare specimens, from the museums of the Vatican, the Louvre, the British Museum, the Royal Institution Academy, Edinburgh, the studios of Mr. D. Brucciani, London, and Mr. J. Annan, Edinburgh, and other collections. Within the edifice are also a large hall, for lectures or exhibitions, and a county museum. This valuable property was presented to the burgh by Mr. William Chambers, of the eminent firm of W. and R. Chambers, whose names have been so long and honourably associated with the cheap literature of the country. A native of Peebles, Mr. Chambers has always evinced a lively interest in the well-being of the burgh; and as a lasting and substantial proof of his desire for its material and intellectual advancement, purchased the building known as 'Queensbury Lodging,' and at considerable expense, had it remodelled, so as to form the above useful and highly ornamental pile. In the quadrangle of the institution stands the old cross of Peebles, which has been restored to the burgh by Sir Adam Hay, Bart., after a sojourn of half a century at King's Meadows.

It is not satisfactorily ascertained at what period Peebles was created a royal burgh; Alexander III was a munificent patron of it, and its original charter is supposed to have been bestowed by that monarch; succeeding kings recognised its rights to the distinction, among whom was James the VI, whose charter granted to the burgesses an extensive range of landed property and right of common in different parts, nearly the whole of which has been lost to the inhabitants. The government is vested in a provost, two baillies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, eleven councillors, and one deacon of the weavers. A sheriff's court for the county, and a sheriff's small debt court are held weekly on Tuesday during certain months of the year; general meetings of the commissioners of supply, road trustees and freeholders of the shire take place here in the months of April and September, and the meetings of lieutenancy as occasion requires. A poor house has recently been erected on the Rosetta road: the situation is well chosen. The Royal Company of Archers, or King's Body-guard for Scotland, come to Peebles from Edinburgh occasionally, attired in the ancient and elegant dress of the bowmen of Scotland, to shoot for the old established prize of a silver arrow, given by the burgh to the most successful marksman.

The places of worship are for those of the Established church; the Free church, Episcopalians, United Presbyterians and Roman Catholics—the last named, on the Rosetta road, was erected in 1858, by the exertions of the Rev. J. Clapperton, aided by numerous friends. It is a plain but not an inelegant specimen of early English architecture, consisting of nave and chancel, and will accommodate 250 persons. In the two chancel windows are beautiful figures of the Virgin Mary and St. Joseph, and a fine old Spanish painting of the Infant Saviour's Presentation in the Temple, overhangs the altar. The chapel and adjoining presbytery are so tastefully grouped as to produce an excellent architectural effect. The Free church is a neat Gothic building; and the Episcopal chapel is finished in a superior style, and embellished with a beautiful window of stained glass. There are several friendly societies, and several excellent schools, both public and private; for the latter this town has been long and deservedly celebrated, with respect both to the method of instruction and the salubrity of their situation. Bonnington Park School (Mr. Browning's) deserves notice, as the proprietor has spared no expense to render it a complete boarding establishment; it is surrounded by some of the finest scenery in the locality, and the grounds are extensive. The ruins of two ancient churches are still extant; one of which was dedicated to Saint Mary—the other built by Alexander III, in the middle of the thirteenth century, and dedicated to the Holy Cross and Saint Nicholas; the same monarch erected, likewise, a house contiguous, for himself, which continued a royal residence until the accession of James VI. to the throne of England. Among the objects in the town and neighbourhood which generally attract attention is Nidpath Castle, a noble ruin, looking down upon the town and the Tweed from a romantic glen, about a mile distant to the west; the building is a massive tower, and, with its interesting site and localities, is the delight of the draughtsman. This locality is much resorted to in summer for its excellent trout and salmon fishing. Half a mile to the east of the town, on a hill called 'Janet's Brae,' may be discerned the traces of two ancient British camps. The market is held on Tuesday; and the fairs on the second Tuesday in January, the first Tuesday in March (for hiring servants); the second Wednesday in May, and the first Tuesday after the 18th of July (for wool); the Tuesday next before the 24th of August, the Wednesday before the 12th of September, the second Tuesday in October, and the Tuesday before the 12th of December.

EDLESTON (or Eddlestone) is a parish and village—the latter four miles north from Peebles, situated on both sides of the Edleston water, which takes it rise from various springs on the north and north-east boundaries, and at Cowey's Linn forms a cascade of thirty-five feet. The South Esk has also its source out of a small lake within two miles of the village. Anciently the kirk and its small hamlet stood among the hills to the east, where some vestiges of them still survive the depreciation of time. The church of the present village is a modern building with a school attached.

BROUGHTON, GLENHOLM, and KILBUCHO are incorporated and contiguous parishes, agricultural and pastoral. The village of Broughton stands on the road from Edinburgh to Dumfries, and from Peebles to Biggar, and is remarkable for its neatness: it was rebuilt by the late James Dickson, Esq., of Kilbucho, in the English fashion. A branch of the Caledonian Railway is in course of construction from Broughton to Biggar, thence to Symington where it joins the main line. There is a church of the Establishment belonging to the united parishes.

DRUMMELZIER (pronounced Drumellyer) is a parish in the south-western part of the county, lying on the east bank of the Tweed—where also stands Drummelzier Castle, formerly a seat of the once powerful family of Tweedie. It is surrounded by some beautiful grounds, and is the last of a chain of fortresses, placed on the banks of the Tweed, which are seen every two or three miles in pursuing the course of the stream. The parish church stands on the Powsail rivulet a little way above its junction with the Tweed.

KIRKURD parish lies on the western confines of the county, and is bounded on the north by the Tarth, a tributary of the Tweed. From the first-named river the land rises in finely cultivated and enclosed grounds and then becomes hilly, with eminences covered with thriving plantations. The ancient church of Kirkurd, belonged at an early period to the bishops of Glasgow, one of whom gave it to the hospital of Soltra, the property of which charitable institution it remained until transferred to the hospital of of Trinity Church, Edinburgh.

LYNE and MEGGET are two parishes ecclesiastically united though not adjacent to each other. Lyne lies on the left bank of the stream of that name, while Megget is situated within the southern border of the county, near the head of Elbeck and Yarrow. It is a bleak, hilly and pastoral district, intersected by the small stream Megget water, which falls into Saint Mary's Loch.

MANOR parish is bounded by Peebles on the north, and Megget on the south, and its northern extremity abuts on the Tweed. The district is the vale of the Manor water, which rises in its southern hilly quarter and falls into the Tweed about two miles above Peebles. The parish formerly belonged to the rector of Peebles, and is supposed to derive its name from being the Manor of that churchman. Several curiosities exist in this locality—amongst these the remains of a Roman camp; a tower raised on an eminence, supposed to have been erected as a watch-tower in early troublous times, and a huge upright stone, of great age, perforated with many holes. But the greatest attraction is perhaps the cottage once inhabited by the late David Ritchie, a deformed and eccentric dwarf, from whom, it is said, Sir Walter Scott drew the fictitious character of the 'Black Dwarf,' in his novel of that name. The cottage is situated in the vale near the public road at the farm-steading, called Woodhouse.

SKIRLING is a small parish and village—the latter 25 miles from Edinburgh, and 2½ N.W. from Broughton, situated on the road from the city named to Leadhills. The parish is bound on the north-east by Kirkurd, on the east by Broughton, on the south by Kilbucho, and on the west by Bigger. It extends about four miles in length from north to south, having a general breadth of one and a half; with a hilly surface, but green and fertile, and well cultivated.

STOBO is a generally well cultivated and planted parish in the western part of the county, lying for the most part on the left bank of the Tweed, and extending about 6 miles in length by four in breadth. The greater part of the parish is hilly and of pastoral character; but adjacent to the Tweed and the Lyne the land is well cultivated and some of it finely planted—the latter character of improvement especially in the grounds surrounding Stobo Castle, a modern and beautiful edifice, situated a short distance from the parish church, within view of the Tweed. Within the parish are extensive slate quarries; there produce is of a fine dark blue colour, and much of it is used in Edinburgh, besides the home district, for roofing houses.

TWEEDSMUIR, about the middle of the 17th century, formed part of the parish of Drummelzier—when it was erected into a separate parish. It lies in the south-western corner of the county, with Lanarkshire on its western border. There are several ancient and rude strongholds in the parish—some of them dignified by the name of 'Castles,' but having few features of the fortress character. Within the bounds of the parish the river Tweed is augmented by the streams of the Fruid and Talla.

PERTHSHIRE.

THIS is one of the most extensive counties in Scotland, lying nearly in the centre of the kingdom, whose great northern and southern divisions it may be said in some measure to connect. It is bounded on the east by the county of Forfar; on the south-east by the counties of Kinross and Fife—from the latter county it is cut off for a considerable distance by the Firth of Tay; further on the south its boundaries are Stirlingshire and the small county of Clackmannan, which latter it embraces on two sides; on the south-west Dumbarton touches it for a short distance; on the west it is bounded by Argyleshire; and on the north-west and north by Inverness-shire. The figure of the county is very irregular, being intruded upon by other counties in some quarters, and having many indentations and projections in other parts; but for these circumstances, its form would be nearly that of a perfect circle. From the Firth of Forth at Culross, on the extreme south, to the Forest of Athol, at the source of the Tilt, on the north, it measures sixty-eight miles; and from Meigle on the east, to Argyleshire on the west, about seventy-seven miles. The contents of the area of this county have been variously estimated; we find one authority computing its superficies at two thousand five hundred and eighty-eight square miles of land, and fifty of lakes; and another (perhaps the most correct), at two thousand eight hundred and thirty square miles of land, and thirty-three of water. About twelve or fifteen years ago, the number of acres cultivated did not exceed six hundred thousand.

EARLY HISTORY.—The monuments of antiquity which exist in Perthshire are sufficiently numerous to afford a field of curious investigation. Lying northward of the Roman wall, this shire was the theatre of the last struggle for independence which the inhabitants of the low country of Scotland made against the arms of their skilful and then invincible oppressors: the final and most distinguished battle fought by the Britons was that against Agricola, under a leader to whom the Romans have given the name of Galgacus. One of the roads formed by the invaders, passing along the district of Strathearn towards Perth, may still be traced, and also from Perth, along Strathmore, to the extremity of the county; the remains of several encampments, likewise, are at this day observable, particularly one at Ardoch, in the parish of Muthill, the largest and most conspicuous in Scotland. This shire also possesses antiquarian remains of a later age and history, in ruined towers and religious structures, the district having once been the residence of a number of powerful chiefs, and of a large body of churchmen. Before the reformation, and during the domination of episcopacy, Perthshire formed the ample diocess of a bishop whose seat was at Dunkeld, as well as another bishopric at Dumblane.

SOIL, SURFACE, AND CLIMATE.—Perthshire may be considered the Yorkshire of Scotland: like that immense county, it is subdivided into districts, which, previous to the jurisdictions established in 1748, were stewartries under the power of different great landed proprietors; the names of these various districts (or feudalities) are Monteith, Gowrie, Perth Proper, Strathearn, Stormont, Breadalbane, Rannoch, Balquhidder, and Athol. Little attention, however, is now paid to these divisions, and the county is arranged more naturally under the two extensive denominations of Highland and Lowland, the range of Grampians forming the line of demarkation. Eighteen parishes belong to the Highland portion, while that of the Lowland comprises fifty-eight. The soil of Perthshire comprehends all the varieties known in Scotland—the carse and loamy being prevalent on the banks of the rivers, and the sandy and tillable classes on the sides of the hills; in many places are extensive mosses, particularly in Monteith district. Within the last ninety years there has been a great deal of planting in Perthshire, greatly to the amelioration of the climate and the advantage of the agriculturist. His Grace the late Duke of Athol acted a most distinguished part in the rearing of plantations; it appears from returns published in 1830, that he planted 15,473 English acres, the number of plants amounted to the enormous number of 27,231,600, of these plantations the principal portion to the amount of about 8,600 acres are of larch, about 1,000 of oak, the remainder are of Scotch fir, spruce fir, a few acres of birch &c. The same patriotic nobleman exerted himself most beneficially in the improvement of the roads of the county, which have latterly been brought into excellent condition. During the progress of the last seventy years, a prodigious and most-gratifying change has been effected in the agriculture of Perthshire, the low parts of which now vie, in rural cultivation, wealth and beauty, with any district in Scotland; the upper portion of the county is still devoted to the pasturage of sheep and cattle, which are mostly driven southward for sale and consumption. The mountains of greatest altitude above the level of the sea, in Perthshire, are—Ben Lawers, 4,015; Ben More, 3,903; Ben Gloa, 3,724,; Schiallion, 3,564; Ben Derig, 3,550; Ben-Ardlanach, 3,500; Ben Ledi, 3,009; Ben Venue, 3,000; Ben Chonzie, 2,922; Farragon, 2,584; Ben Achally, 1,800; Birnam Hill (mentioned in Shakspere's play of 'Macbeth'), 1,580; Turleum, 1,400; Blair, 1,300; King's Seat, 1,196; Lochtown Hill, 1,172; Kinpurnie, 1,151; Beingloe, 1,040; Dunsinane (whereon was a strong hold of Macbeth, twelve miles from Birnam Hill), 1,024; Kinnoul, 700; and Barry, 688.

PRODUCE AND MANUFACTURES.—The subject of the mineralogy of Perthshire affords sufficient materials to excite and to reward the curiosity and research of the scientific student of the works of nature; but, in a commercial or economical point of view, its minerals are of no great importance. At Culross, upon the Forth, coal has been wrought for ages; but from its situation, it is of little advantage to this county. Limestone rocks are found in a variety of localities, both in the high and the low country; but the use of lime is greatly impeded from the want of proper fuel for burning it—peat, which is the fuel of all the inland districts, being a weak and ineffectual agent in the process of calcination. Marble, of a superior quality, is worked near Glentilt; beds of fire-clay have been discovered near Culross; and in that neighbourhood, on the Devon, there is abundance of ironstone. About Callander that species of rock called breccia, or, more familiarly, 'plum-pudding stone,' is not uncommon; and here also, as in other parts, are various kinds of slate. A chain of sandstone runs from Gartree to the vicinity of Crieff; upon the Tay is one of the most celebrated stone quarries in this country; the principal stone of which the Grampians consist is granite. Perthshire abounds with game of nearly every description, though the large species is now considerably diminished in numbers: the red deer, or stag may be said to inhabit the forests and mountain glades in the most perfect state of nature and wildness; it is cautious in the extreme, and singularly jealous of the human form, eluding with wonderful effect the wiles of the sportsman. During the sojourn of Her Majesty and Prince Albert with the Marquess of Breadalbane the Prince enjoyed the sport of deer-stalking with all the excitement of a sportsman. A variety of other game are also inhabitants of these wilds; among the rest, the roe, a much more familiar animal than the stag—appearing, even in summer, in the woodlands and plantations of the valleys, down to the habitable places. In regard to its natural features, Perth is esteemed a county of first-rate interest. From its inland situation, Perthshire of course does not comprise any combination of marine and mountain scenery, which form the great attraction of the West Highlands; yet, as it abounds in inland lakes, and possesses rising grounds of as grand a character as that district, it is in no respect inferior as the object of 'a tour in search of the picturesque and beautiful,' while its charming plains may be said to form an additional attraction. The principal pursuit of industry, in the towns and villages of Perthshire, is the weaving of linen goods, chiefly of coarse fabrics; in connection with this branch of manufacture, flax spinning mills and a considerable number of bleach fields are established. The manufactures of the county are not, however, wholly confined to that of linen: ginghams and pullicates are produced at Perth, and cotton spinning works are in constant operation at Stanley (in Auchtergaven) and Doune; the woollen manufacture is carried on to a limited extent, in two or three places in the shire; and considerable distilleries and breweries are found in several towns and villages. It may be remarked that the whole of this large and populous county exhibits in almost every portion, manifestations of being in a thriving and prosperous condition, and affords a strong example of what has been effected during the last century and a half, in the civilization of the country, in the exchange of a life of almost savage strife, ignorance, and poverty, for one of intelligence, peace, and all the comforts to be procured by industry.

Rivers, Lakes, and Railways.—Like all elevated countries, Perthshire abounds with extensive lakes and rivers, which occupy valleys lying between lofty mountains. The chief running waters are the Tay, the Earn, the Garry, the Bran, the Almond, the Teath, the Allan, the Dochart, the Tummell, the Bruar, the Ericht, the Ardle, the Shee, and the Isla—besides innumerable third and fourth rate rivers and streamlets of all sizes. The Forth, from rising in Stirlingshire, is not considered a Perthshire river, though it flows along a large portion of its south-west quarter. The chief lakes of the county are Loch Katrine, Loch Achray, Loch Ard, Loch Voil, Loch Lubnaig, Loch Dochart, and Loch Earn—those are in the south-west part of the shire; Loch Tay, in the centre of the mountainous district; and Loch Rannoch, Loch Ericht, and Loch Lydoch, (the two latter in part only), in the north-west quarter; in the lower divisions there are some smaller and less important lakes. The most remarkable mineral waters as yet discovered in this county are those of Pitcaithly, near the bridge of Earn, which have been long famed for their efficacy in curing scrofula, and likewise complaints of the stomach. There are several lines of railway passing through the shire; the 'Scottish Central,' the 'Scottish North Eastern,' the 'Edinburgh, Perth, and Dundee,' the 'Dundee, Perth, and Aberdeen,' the 'Perth, Almond Valley, and Methven,' the 'Perth and Dunkeld,' the 'Crieff Junction,' the 'Dunblane, Doune, and Callander,' &c.

Divisions, Representation, &c.—Perthshire comprehends seventy-two entire parishes and twelve parts of parishes. The county is divided into ten districts, each under the jurisdiction of a justice of peace court, and of a body of deputy-lieutenants; it is further divided into two sheriff-substituteries—the seat of the one being Perth, the other Dunblane. The shire contains only two royal burghs, Perth and Culross: the former returns one member to parliament, and the latter is a contributory burgh, joining with Stirling, Queensferry, Inverkeithing, and Dunfermline, in sending another. The shire, in common with other Scottish counties, likewise has one representative in the senate.

ABERNETHY AND ABERARGIE,

WITH THE PARISHES OF ARNGASK, DRON, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

ABERNETHY is a parish lying partly in the county of Fife and partly in Perthshire—the village, said to have been the capital of the Pictish kingdom, in Scotland, is scattered over a considerable space of ground, 8 miles S. E. from Perth, and 14 N. W. from Cupar, in Fife; about half a mile north of the river Earn, near to its junction with the Tay. It is seated to the south of a spacious and rich agricultural dale, bounded by lofty hills which are chiefly planted with timber. Some of the houses are tolerably wellbuilt, but the only structure deserving particular notice is a circular tower, the only one of its kind (with the exception of that at Brechin), in Scotland. It stands in an angle of the burial ground of the Established Church, and is about seventy-five feet high, and twenty-four feet diameter at its base. It is composed of sixty-four courses of regularly hewn stone, and contains one bell and the parish clock. The date of its erection is unknown, but tradition ascribes its origin to the Picts, who are said to have built it in one night, and that the stones of which it is constructed were removed from the distance of twelve miles, by a formed line—one man passing them on to another, until the whole work was completed. Abernethy is a burgh of barony, and its inhabitants are for the most part employed in weaving. The parish of Abernethy is bounded by the river Earn on the north, on the east by Newburgh and Abdie, and on the south by Auchtermuchty and Strathmiglo; it is between five and six miles both in breadth and length, and besides the village of its name already described, contains the small one of ABERARGIE, situated about a mile to the west. A fair is held on the fourth Wednesday in May.

DRON, a parish in the south-eastern extremity of Perthshire, extending into the beautiful district of Strathearn is divided from Abernethy, on the east by the rivulet Farg. Although in some parts the surface is broken and irregular, in the lower part the land is flat and fertile, being a portion of the rich carse of the Earn. The church, a handsome Gothic edifice, is a fine object on the rising ground to the left, on approaching the Bridge of Earn from the south.

ARNGASK is a parish lying between Abernethy and Forgaudenny, and partly in the counties of Perth, Fife, and Kinross. The country here is hilly, and more pastoral than arable.

AUCHTERARDER, ABERUTHVEN, BLACKFORD
AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

AUCHTERARDER is a parish, and the seat of a presbytery—the village, a considerable one, and of some consequence in manufactures, is 20 miles from Stirling and 14 from Perth; situated on the high road between the latter city and Doune, on the south side of the river Earn (whose stream is famed for trout and salmon), and it is a station on the Scottish central railway. The village, which at one period enjoyed the distinction of a royal burgh, consists of one large street, which extends nearly a mile in length, and is famous as the place where originated the disruption in the Church of Scotland, with the Rev. Robert Young, who is still resident there. The majority of the inhabitants are employed in weaving The ruins of Kincardine castle, the ancient seat of the Montrose family, are in the neighbourhood, and in the occupation of Captain Grove. The road to the castle, from Auchterarder, passes between the bellows and the forge of an ingenious blacksmith named Hally. The market is held on Saturday. Fairs on the last Tuesday in March, the first Thursday after the first Tuesday in May, the Friday before the August Falkirk tryst, the Friday before the Falkirk Michaelmas tryst, and, the largest, on the sixth of December.

ABERUTHVEN is a small village, situated two miles E. from Auchterarder, on the road to Perth. The village contains a Free church, and the ruins of an old church, part of which has been converted into a vault for the family of James Duncan, Esq., of Damside, ; and a short distance hence is a mausoleum belonging to the noble family of Montrose.

The village and parish of BLACKFORD lies in the district of Monteith; the former being situated three miles and a half west of Auchterarder, on the road from Doune to Perth, at the extremity of the Ochil hills. The parish is watered by the Allan, from the north of which river the ground rises and forms a group of sandy hills, with a number of vast hollows, some of them round, and others extending in length, forming little valleys, through which, for the most part, run small brooks; there are also some small lakes in the district. A fair is held in the village on the 7th October.

AUCHTERGAVEN (or Auchtergovan), is a village and parish, situated on the road from Perth to Dunkeld. The district, which is hilly and moorish, lies on the south-west bank of the Tay, and on the south-east side of Birnam hill. The manor and ancient parish of LOGIEBRIDE is now a component part of this parish. A church of the Establishment, a Free church, an United Presbyterian chapel, and a parochial school, are in the parish. The thriving hamlet of STANLEY, partly in the parish of Auchtergaven and partly in that of Redgorton, is situated two miles from Auchtergaven, and six from Perth. There is an extensive cotton spinning and manufacturing establishment in this village. A Free church, with a school in connection, is in the hamlet, also a parochial school. A branch from the Scottish Central Railway comes to the village. A fair for cattle is held in Auchtergaven, on the second Friday in November.

BLAIR-ATHOLE AND BRIDGE OF TILT.

BLAIR-ATHOLE is a small village and parish, included in the district of Athol or Athole. The word Athole signifies pleasant land, and Blair of Athole, the name of its principal valley, means the field or vale of Athole. The district is 45 miles in length, and 36 in breadth, and the parish is 24 miles from N.E. to S.W., and 20 from N. to S. It lies on the north-west Highlands of Perthshire, bounded on the south by Fortingall, Fosse, and Moulin, and on the north by Inverness and Aberdeenshire, and contains a large tract of highland territory, the mountains of which are almost covered with large and beautiful woods, interspersed with fertile vales (which are in a high state of cultivation), lakes, and rivers, the principal of which are Loch Garry and Loch Loch, the Tummel, Tilt, and Garry, all abounding with a variety of fish. The village is situated on the north side of Garry, 20 miles N.W. from Dunkeld, on the Inverness road. Within a short distance of the village is the noble old Castle of Blair-now called Athole House, the ancient family residence of the Dukes of Athole. The mansion is a long narrow building, three storeys high (formerly much higher), and a place of considerable strength, but reduced in height by the attacks of the Highlanders in 1716. Blair Athole is celebrated for its noble old woods and waterfalls; three miles to the west of the village are those of Bruar, whose stream makes several distinct falls, rushing through a rough perpendicular channel, the banks of which are covered with fine firs planted by the late Duke, in compliance with the request of Burns in his well-known petition. A branch of the Union Bank of Scotland is in operation; and in the village is also an excellent hotel (the Blair Athole), of which Mr. Mac Farlane is the proprietor.

In the parish of Athole is the beautiful little village of the BRIDGE OF TILT, separated only from Blair Athole by the water of Tilt, which is crossed by a neat bridge, that gives a prefix to the name of the place. It consists of a single row of neat houses, with a comfortable-looking inn, and its pretty rural aspect is embellished by the beautiful residence and grounds of J. P. M'Inroy, Esq. The scenery around, too, is very charming, and includes Glen Tilt, the falls of Fender, &c., all combining to interest the tourist. The principal heritor of the parish is the Duke of Athole.

POST OFFICE, BLAIR ATHOLE—Archibald Stewart, Post Master.—Letters from EDINBURGH and the SOUTH arrive every afternoon at ten minutes before two; and are despatched at ten minutes past two.

BLAIRGOWRIE AND CLUNIE,

WITH THE PARISHES OF BENDOCHY, KINCLAVEN, AND KINLOCH.

BLAIRGOWRIE is a parish containing the thriving little town of its name—the latter 12 miles E. from Dunkeld, 5 W. from Alyth, and the same distance north from Coupar Angus; beautifully situated on the southern slope of the range of hills which bound the valley of Strathmore on the north, and at the mouth of the pass through which the great north road to Fort George (by the Spittal of Glenshee and the Castletown of Braemar) runs; the river Ericht passes close to the town, and propels the machinery of numerous flax spinning mills on a large scale on both sides of the river; and there are several linen manufactories. A branch of the Scottish North-Eastern Railway from Coupar Angus was opened in 1855, and by its means there is communication with most parts of the United Kingdom. On the other side of the river are the villages of Old and New Rattray—which see. Blairgowrie was created a burgh of barony in the year 1634, by a charter from Charles I, and is now governed by a baron baillie and four councillors. A sheriff's small debt court is held for the disposal of cases not exceeding £8. 6s. 8d., four times a year; the magistrates hold a monthly court, settling claims under £5; and a police court sits daily. There are three branch banking establishments, a savings' bank, and clubs for the votaries of angling, curling and quoiting.

A new church was erected in 1824, upon an elevated site, since when a handsome Free church has been built; and in 1858 another Free church was erected in Rorry-street; there are also places of worship for Episcopalians, United Presbyterians and Roman Catholics. Schools are connected with most of the places of worship.

Blairgowrie parish is of an irregular form, about eleven miles in length and three in breadth. It is divided into two districts by the Grampians, which rise immediately north of the village; the lower district is highly cultivated and fertile, while the upper is comparatively barren and moorish; with the exception of the banks of the river, which are good alluvial soil. The scenery in the neighbourhood of the town is very beautiful; and in the adjoining parish, about Craighall (the seat of Robert Clerk Rattray, Esq.), it is of the most romantic character, and is scarcely surpassed in any part of Scotland; the proprietor kindly permits strangers visiting the place to walk through the entire grounds. To lovers of the 'gentle art' of angling, no locality could be more suitable for enjoying this healthful and delightful amusement—there being not only excellent trout and salmon fishing in the Ericht and the Tay, the Isla and burns of Lunan and Lornty (which are all within a moderate distance of the village), but likewise capital perch and pike fishing in the several lochs in the neighbourhood; there are six of these beautiful lakes not more than four miles from Blairgowrie, all abounding with the two latter species of fish. On account of the inviting attractions around, the salubrity of the air, and the numerous lovely walks in the environs, the town is much frequented in summer by families from more crowded places, who are happy to exchange the confined atmosphere which they usually inhale for the fresh invigorating breezes and rural perambulations of the county. Amongst the antiquities in the vicinity, the remains of the castle of Glasclune must be noticed; they present a strikingly picturesque ruin, situated on the precipitous bank of a narrow wooded glen, about two miles from the village. Fairs are held at Blairgowrie on the third Wednesday in March, on the 26th of May (if it falls on Wednesday—if not, on the first Wednesday after), the 23rd of July, the first Wednesday of November, the 22nd of November (or the first Tuesday after), and the Wednesday before Falkirk tryst; a market for cattle and grain is also held every fortnight, on Tuesdays, which is well attended. The annual Martinmas market, for hiring and cattle, is held on the 23rd of November, except when the 23rd falls upon a Saturday, Sunday or Monday.

CLUNIE parish lies about five miles west of Blairgowrie; it includes part of the lower range of the Grampians, which are barren and covered with heather. The scenery, however, on the whole, is romantic and pleasing, presenting abundance of wood and water. The loch of Clunie is one of the most beautiful small sheets of water in the country; within it is a small island (thought to be artificial), on which stands an ancient tower, the property of the Airly family, which is supposed to have been the birth place of the 'Admirable Crichton,' whose father, Sir Robert Crichton, lord advocate of Scotland, was then proprietor of the barony of Clunie; the tower is still in good repair, and partly furnished, though rarely occupied, but it is open to strangers desirous of visiting it. On the northern side of the lake lies the charming property of Forneth, belonging to Mr. Spied.

POST OFFICE, High-street, BLAIRGOWRIE, Robert Ayson, Post Master—Letters from all parts o GREAT BRITAIN and IRELAND (except KIRKMICHAEL and FORNETH) arrive (from COUPAR ANGUS) at twenty minutes past seven and thirty-five minutes past ten every morning; and are despatched every morning at half-past eight, and afternoon at four.

Letters from KIRKMICHAEL arrive every morning at eight; and are despatched at eleven.

Letters from FORNETH arrive every afternoon at thirty minutes past three; and are despatched every morning at eight. No mails on Sundays.

CALLANDER,

ABERFOYLE, BALQUHIDDER, LOCHEARN HEAD, PORT OF MENTEITH, GARTMORE, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

CALLANDER is a modern and neat village and parish—the former 52 miles N. W. from Edinburgh, 40 S. W. from Perth, 35 N. from Glasgow, 16 N. W. from Stirling, 8 N. W. from Doune, and 6 N. from Thornhill; situated in a beautiful valley, on both sides of the Teith, which river is here crossed by a bridge of three arches; and the houses are disposed in regular plan, and covered with blue slates. The Dunblane, Doune, and Callander Railway terminates here, this line has been the means of bringing this much visited-locality within a few hours' ride of any part of the kingdom. The church, a modern erection, with a spire, is a handsome building, and an ornament to the village. The scenery around Callander is uncommonly beautiful: immediately above the village is a peculiarly lovely spot, formed by the junction of two little rivers, issuing respectively from Loch Lubnaig and Loch Vennacher, which when united form the Teith. Callander may be reckoned the threshold of the Highlands in this quarter. A mile west of the village is the pass of Leny, which affords access to a delightful range of mountain prospect; the bridge of Brackiyn is another fine point in the scenery directly surrounding Callander; and the ride to Loch Katrine and the Trossachs (classic scenes), about ten miles from the village, is extremely fine. The parish extends from the banks of the Teith to the Grampians; it is sixteen miles in length, by a breadth of ten. The low grounds are arable and fertile, but the upper country is wild and heathy. Callander has four annual fairs, namely, the 21st of March, first Tuesday in May (old style), first Thursday in December (old style), and the third Tuesday in July.

ABERFOYLE, a parish (and the name of a celebrated pass or long valley between the Highlands and Lowlands), is remarkable for its picturesque scenery, its fine lakes and numerous streams, and the marked direction taken by the Grampians through the lower part of it; as well as for producing a great quantity of rare plants, suited to reward the researches of the botanist. The village or 'clachan' of Aberfoyle is the scene of some fictions in the novel of 'Rob Roy.' At the head of the valley or pass lies Loch Ard, a bright and placid basin, embedded in surrounding woods, over which rises the gracefully towering form of Ben Lomond, one of whose summit platforms ascends upwards of three thousand feet above the level of the sea. The best view of this noble eminence is obtained from a wooded promontory which juts out into the water (scarcely leaving room for the road that passes on to the westward), and which, it is said, was the spot on which the skirmish occurred, described in the above novel, where Helen Macgregor makes her first appearance. Fairs are held within the parish on the first Friday in August, and the third Thursday in October.

BALQUHIDDER is a Highland parish, lying in the western extremity of the county, among the Grampians. The village is situated at the east end of Loch Voil, at the distance of thirteen miles from Callander; and is remarkable as the last residence of the famous Rob Roy, before mentioned, whose grave is pointed out in the churchyard. The parish is altogether mountainous and pastoral, and, from the number of acclivities composing its sides, has obtained the popular appellation of the 'Braes of Balquhidder,' by which it is celebrated in Scottish song and legend. It comprises several lofty mountains, among which Ben More rises in majestic superiority, and likewise possesses many beautiful lakes, including Loch Doine, Loch Voil, part of Loch Lubnaig, and part of Loch Earn, with several others of minor celebrity. LOCHEARN HEAD is a small hamlet in the parish of Balquhidder, deriving its name from its situation at the head of Loch Earn, a delightful elongated sheet of water, about seven miles in length by one in breadth; it is much frequented by parties in the angling season, and supplies capital sport. A considerable portion of the ancient Caledonian forest extends into this district.

PORT OF MENTEITH (or Monteith), is a parish in the ancient district of Monteath, fifteen miles from Stirling. The chief object of attraction in the parish is the Loch or Lake of Menteith, a beautiful sheet of water near the centre of the district, adjoining the church and manse. It is about five miles in circumference, and is adorned by the small island of Inchmahone, where stand the fine remains of a priory or monastery founded in 1238. The ruins of the church and the cloisters, are very extensive, and exhibit many fine specimens of fine old architecture of a massive nature; the arch-way entrance is very elegant. The dormitory and vaults have been for many ages the place of sepulture of many noble and ancient families. The ruins of these interesting buildings are sequestered in overhanging woods of considerable age and growth; some of the trees are said to be upwards of three centuries old. In this vicinity on a gentle eminence, are seen the remains of what is still known as Queen Mary's Bower, where, after the disastrous battle of Pinkie, the young Princess found a safe asylum till her departure for France. The boxwood bower with its large hawthorn in the centre, where the youthful princess passed some of her happiest days, is still an object of interest to all who visit the island. In a smaller islet a short distance from Inchmahone stand the ruins of the principal residence of the Earls of Menteith.

COMRIE, SAINT FILLANS AND MONZIEVAIRD.

COMRIE is a parish and village—the latter respectable and populous, is 58 miles N.W. from Edinburgh, 24 W. from Perth, and 6¾ W. from Crieff; situated in a beautiful and romantic valley at the foot of the Grampians, and on the north bank of the Earn, at the junction of the Lednock. Loch Earn lies at the western extremity of the parish, and from it flows the beautiful Earn, along which there is a public road through the valley of Strathearn. In the village the manufacture of woollens is carried on to a limited extent, and there are two dye works. A church of the Establishment, a Free church, and an United Presbyterian chapel, are the places of worship—the first-mentioned is a handsome and modern building, with a fine spire. In the neighbourhood are presented some interesting and attractive objects; the most remarkable are vestiges of Roman encampments on the plain of Dalginross, several druidical circles, and a monument of granite, seventy two feet high, erected in 1815, to the memory of the late Lord Melville. There is also another memorial, formed of the same material, eighty feet high, to the late Sir David Baird. Five fairs are held in the year, namely, Saint Kenach's on the 22nd of March, the first Tuesday in May, the 11th of July, the 8th of November, and the 4th of December.

MONZIEVAIRD parish includes the abrogated parish of Strowan; thus united it is bounded on the north by Comrie and Monzie, by the former also on the west, by Muthill on the south, and by Crieff on the east. The river Earn passes through the district from we to east; and in the neighbourhood of this stream th country is beautiful, well planted, and enclose There are several small lakes in the parish, amon which Monzievaird lake, situated at the bottom of a fi wood, and well stored with pike, perch, and eels, a delightful object to passengers, and a great orna ment to the pleasure grounds of Ochtertyre. On th banks of the lake a fine repeating echo is produce There are some other seats of great beauty and tast among which Lawers is the most distinguished. was in this parish that the atrocious act of annihilatio was all but carried into effect upon the clan Murra by the clan Drummond. The latter being the mos powerful, collected the men, women and childre belonging to the Murray clan, in the old paris church, and set fire to it, when every soul was burned save one, who leaped out of a window, and was caugh in the arms of one of the Drummonds, who, bein more humane than the rest, saved the man's life.

SAINT FILLANS is a small hamlet in the parish o Comrie 5½ miles from that village, pleasantly situate at the foot of Loch Earn, where boats are kept for th accommodation of fishing parties or other visiters, wh are attracted hither by the delightful scenery of thi district. The places of worship are a church of th Establishment, and a Free church; and there is an ex cellently conducted inn, affording every accommodatio to gentlemen during the fishing and shooting season.

COUPAR ANGUS,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF BURRELTOWN, WOODSIDE, WASHINGTON AND BALBROGIE.

COUPAR ANGUS is a neat market town, in the parish of its name; 15 miles N.W. from Dundee, 12 E by N. from Perth, and 4¾ miles from Blairgowrie. It is a station on the Scottish North-Eastern Railway, and pleasantly situated on the Isla, a few miles above its junction with the Tay, on the main roads from Dundee to Blairgowrie and from Perth to Forfar. A branch of the Scottish North-Eastern Railway is now in operation from Coupar to Blairgowrie. A small stream, tributary to the Isla, divides the town into two parts; that portion which lies on the south of this rivulet is all that belongs to the county of Angus (or Forfar). In ancient times this place was the seat of an abbey of Cistercian monks, founded by Malcolm IV. in 1164, and endowed with considerable revenues by that monarch. At the reformation this edifice was destroyed by a mob from Perth; its ruins are sufficient to indicate that it was an establishment of considerable magnitude. The remains occupy part of the site of a Roman camp, said to have been formed by the army of Agricola in his seventh expedition. The town is compact and well built, and has the advantage of being lighted with gas, and considerable improvements have been made in the proximity of the Railway station. The venerable steeple in Queen-street has recently undergone a thorough repair, and is used as a clock tower. The street heretofore called Abbey-street has changed its name to Queen-street, to perpetuate the remembrance of Her Majesty's transit through Coupar Angus in 1849. Considerable quantities of linen fabrics are manufactured here, and there is a plash mill, a tannery, several saw mills, and farina works in the neighbourhood. There are three banking establishments, namely, branches respectively of the National Bank of Scotland, the Central Bank of Scotland, and the Union Bank of Scotland, also a savings' bank. The town is governed by commissioners of police and police magistrates under the provisions of the Police Act of 1850. A justice court is held occasionally, and a sheriffs court on the second Thursdays in January, April, July, and October. At both these courts claims for small debts are adjudicated.

The old parish church was an ancient building, but was so far decayed as to necessitate its being taken down. A larger and more elaborate edifice, in the Gothic style, is being erected on the site; Mr. Carver of Kinloch, Meigle, is the architect. The church has a large graveyard around it, in which are several tombs and monuments of venerable date. This edifice stands in Forfarshire. There is a very neat Free Church with a school-room adjoining, and there are four other places of worship not connected with the Establishment. The parish of Coupar Angus extends five miles along the east bank of the river Isla, varying from one to two miles in breadth; the surface, arable and meadow land, is well cultivated and enclosed. Within the limits of the parish are the villages of BALBROGIE and WASHINGTON, both in the southern part of the district. There is a market for grain, cattle, &c. every Thursday. Fairs the third Thursday in March for horses and cattle; the Tuesday before the 26th May for hiring and for cattle; the third Wednesday in July for horses, sheep, and cattle; the first Tuesday in October for cattle and sheep; and the Tuesday before the 22nd November for hiring and cattle.

BURRELTOWN and WOODSIDE are villages lying close together, in the parish of Cargill, on the road from Coupar Angus to Perth; distant two miles from the former and eleven from the latter place. There is a station of the Scottish North-Eastern Railway at Woodside, a Free church, and two schools.

CRIEFF,

WITH THE PARISHES OF MONZIE, FOWLIS WESTER, MADDERTY, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS, AND THE VILLAGES OF HARRIOTFIELD, GLENALMOND, GILMORTON, BUCHANTY, AND LOGIEALMOND.

CRIEFF is a parish and market town—the latter 22 miles N. from Stirling, 17 W. from Perth, and 6½ E. from Comrie: situated in one of the most delightful districts of Scotland, on the southern declivity of a hill near the Grampians, having the Earn and several other streams at the bottom, backed by hills, crags and the Knock of Crieff, all of considerable altitude—the outports of the ancient Grampians and the bulwarks of Scottish independence. It occupies the mouth of the important pass at the Sma' Glen, where the Romans had a station, and where tradition lays the bones of Ossian, and points to a fragment of his displaced tombstone. It proceeds into the Highlands of Perthshire, having a wild mountainous region on the one side and rich soft vales on the other. Crieff is a thriving and increasing town—deriving no small advantage from the resort, in the summer months, of invalids and others, who are attracted by the beauty of the scenery and the salubrity of its situation: but it is deficient in houses fit for families of the higher class, and many are thereby prevented from taking up their abode here. This reproach is now being gradually removed. Lady Willoughby de Eresby and Anthony Murray, Esq. of Crieff, offering every encouragement to persons who may be inclined to erect villas, they having appropriated charming sites, for that purpose. Crieff has been lauded as the Montpelier of Scotland; and its salubrity of air and beauty of scenery, go far to entitle it to this appellation. The Crieff Junction Railway has added considerably to the prosperity of this place affording as it does easy access from all parts of the kingdom. It is favoured too, in being the seat of educational establishments of the first order — among these Saint Margaret's College, conducted by the Rev. Alexander Lendrum, M.A., for the education of young ladies, stands pre-eminent. Here are imparted all the branches of a sound English education and those more ornamental, together with French, German, Italian, &c. The visitor is the Bishop of Saint Andrews. This institution is situated at the east end of the town, commanding an extensive and delightful view of the charming vale of Strathearn, with all its varied scenery. There is an endowed school, Taylor's Institute, for the endowment of which William Taylor, of Cornton, who died in 1841, left his whole fortune 'for educating the children of the poor in the most useful branches of education, and for the formation of a suitable library, with lectures on such branches of science as may interest the community at large, and tend to elevate their intellectual character and promote their temporal happiness, for these purposes an elegant building with convenient house for the master has been erected at the east end of the town. The Morrisonian Institute about to be erected is an endowment by the late Thomas Morrison, builder, of Edinburgh, a native of Muthill, who died about 1820. He bequeathed £12,000 to be expended in the building and endowment of an educational establishment when that sum had accumulated to £20,000; it has now reached £30,000, and a site for the building has been purchased in Crieff at a cost of £2,000. The deed provides that both sexes shall receive a classical education at nominal fees.

Among the public establishments or institutions may be named a mechanics' institute, a library, a masonic hall, and a large assembly room. The principal branches of trade carried on here are comprised in the manufacture of tartans, shawls, gala-plaids, and other fabrics in woollen and cotton; tanning and grain mills. The principal mill in the manufacture of tartans, &c., before mentioned, belongs to Messrs. M'Ewan and Sons, who employ a considerable number of hands. There is an excellent hotel, proverbial for its arrangements as conducive to the comfort of families and other visitants, called the Drummond Arms in James square. Two newspapers are published here—the 'Crieff Herald' and the 'Crieff Journal;' both have a good circulation in the district of Strathearn. A sheriff small debt court is held four times a year—namely, on the first Thursday in February, May, August, and November.

The places of worship are the parish church, a spacious and neat chapel of ease, a Free church, and others for United Presbyterians, Episcopalians, and Baptists. There are nine annual fairs — namely, the first Thursday in January, the third Thursday in February, the second Thursday in March, the first Thursday in April, the first and first and last Thursdays in June, the second Thursday in July, the third Thursday in August, and the Thursday immediately proceeding Falkirk October tryst.

The parish of MONZIE, which is bounded on the south of Crieff, lies on the south side of the Grampians; it is a mountainous district, not above one-third part being arable—the remainder heath and moss; it is watered by the Almond, the Keltie, and the Shaggie, upon which are several romantic cascades. The only inhabited portions of the district are two valleys, separated from each other by a ridge of hills four miles broad. The church is a modern building: near it, on the banks of the rivulet, is the parochial school.

FOWLIS WESTER is a parish in the district of Strathearn, and lying north of Crieff; it is intersected by the river Almond, which here flows eastward to the Tay. The parish is now under fine cultivation and well enclosed.

DOUNE, DEANSTON, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DOUNE is a respectable and thriving village in the parish of Kilmadock and district of Monteith, 44 miles W.N.W. from Edinburgh, 35 S.W. from Perth, 19 S. from Crieff, 9 N.W. from Stirling, 8 S.E. from Callander, 4 N. from Thornhill, and the same distance W. from Dunblane. The Dunblane, Doune, and Callander Railway possess a station here. The town occupies a pleasant situation on the north bank of the Teith, and consists principally of three streets, radiating from a centre, where the market cross stands. Doune was formerly noted for its manufacture of Highland pistols, which branch has long become extinct. The cotton manufacture is extensively carried on; and there are established in Doune branches of the 'Union Bank of Scotland,' and 'Central Bank of Scotland.'

In 1826 a new parish church was erected; its style is Gothic, with a handsome tower; the interior is ornamented with a beautiful pulpit, particularly worthy of notice: for this public work the parishioners are indebted to the Earl of Moray, the patron and chief heritor of the parish, and owner of Doune Castle, once the family seat of the Earls of Monteith. The ruins of this once noble castle stand in the immediate neighbourhood, upon an elevated peninsula formed by the junction of the Ardoch water with the Teith. To judge from the massiveness and extent of its remains, the castle appears to have belonged to that first-rate order of Scottish fortresses of which those of Edinburgh, Stirling, and Dumbarton afford entire specimens. There still remains one huge square building, the walls of which are forty feet high and ten feet thick, together with a tower which rises above the rest to the height of eighty feet, ascending proudly over the lofty trees that encompass the place, and overlooking a country eminent in beauty and fertility to whatever direction the eye may be turned. The fine old bridge which crosses the Teith a little above the castle was erected by Robert Spittal, a native of Stirling, who had amassed a fortune by being tailor to Margaret of England, widow of James IV: this princess was frequently an inhabitant of Doune Castle, and the unfortunate Mary Queen of Scots is also said to have resided some time in it. The parish of Kilmadock comprises a district of great fertility; the land upon the banks of the Forth and Teith produce abundant crops of every species of grain: from the level margin of the former river the ground rises gradually to the Grampain mountains, which form the northern boundary of the parish; the face of the country here is delightful, with many romantic features. A short distance from Doune is the small village of DEANSTON, mainly supported by the cotton manufacture before mentioned. Fairs are held in Doune on the second Wednesday in May, the last Wednesday in July, the first Tuesday and Wednesday and the fourth Wednesday in November.

DUNBARNY, WITH BRIDGE OF EARN.

DUNBARNY (or Dumbarny) parish is situated in the south-eastern part of the country, occupying a rich portion of Strathearn district. The church of Dunbarny is close by the village of the BRIDGE OF EARN, which latter is three miles and a half from Perth. Since the latter village has become populous and extensive, it has assumed the character of the capital of the district, while the name of the parish has sunk into comparative insignificance. Pitcaithley spring, near the Bridge of Earn, has been long celebrated for affording relief to those afflicted with the gravel, scurvy, &c.; and the scenery around is beautiful and romantic. The great north road passes through the district towards Perth; and the Edinburgh and Northern railway, includes in its route Bridge of Earn, where a station for that line is established.

The parish of Dunbarny occupies the south-eastern part of Perthshire, and a pleasant part of Strathearn, north from Dron. It is bounded by the hill of Mordon (or Moncrieff), on the north and on the west by Forgandenny. It is intersected by the river Earn in various windings; the flat and rising grounds being adorned with plantations, avenues, and refreshing hedge-rows. The Earn is crossed in this parish by a handsome bridge giving its name to the village above mentioned.

DUNBLANE.

DUNBLANE is a small ancient city, in the parish of its name, and is the capital of the western district of Perthshire, 41 miles N.W. from Edinburgh, 33 N.E. from Glasgow, 28 S.W. from Perth, 11 from Callander, and 3 from Doune, charmingly situated on the bank of the river Allan, which flows through a great part of the parish, and affords excellent sport to the angler, there being a good supply of fine trout, besides salmon and grilse in their season. Dunblane is much resorted to in the summer season as a watering place, there being an excellent mineral spring on the property of the Hon. Captain Arthur H. Drummond, of Cromlix, in the vicinity of the town. The Scottish Central Railway passes through, and has a station in the town, and the Dunblane, Doune and Callendar commences here. Dunblane was formerly the see of a bishop, founded by David I.; and the great object of attraction in the present day is what was once the cathedral, the choir of which is now the parish church, all the other parts of the edifice being in a state of decay. It stands on an eminence on the eastern bank of the Allan, overlooking the town, and is a large Gothic structure, with a steeple of modern erection, one hundred and twenty feet in height. That part of the town which adjoins the church, from its being composed chiefly of old dignified looking houses, exhibits the appearance of what is termed the 'Close,' or the precinct of a cathedral. The good and learned Leighton, whose fame is in all the churches, was at one time bishop of Dunblane, and bequeathed his valuable library to the clergy of the diocese; the books are kept in a suitable building called the Leightonian Library, to which the public have access on very easy terms; and a public reading room is held in a part of the building.

Dunblane is a place of limited trade, and not conspicuous as one of manufactures, although there are many excellent falls of water on the river. In the neighbourhood there are some establishments where woollen cloth is made, and a little weaving is carried on; in the High-street is a superior commercial and posting inn, and in the same street is a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland. This place is the residence of a sheriff substitute, and other functionaries. A sheriff's court for the recovery of small debts, and for ordinary business, is held every Wednesday, and justice of peace courts occasionally. The court-house and prison are modern buildings, convenient to their respective purposes.

The places of worship are the parish church (before noticed), a Free church, a United Presbyterian, and a handsome episcopal chapel. Besides the parochial school, which is both well conducted and well attended, there are others connected with the Free and Episcopal churches, and one for infants. The country to the south of the town is very beautiful, and is finely ornamented with plantations. The ride from Dunblane to Stirling is much and justly admired. The vale of Strathallan, through which flows the river Allan, lies to the north and east of the town. The fields on the banks of the river are fertile, but as the grounds approach the hills they are of a moorish character, although excellently adapted for pastoral purposes; and the daily produce of this district is in high repute. At the lower end of the town, is the romantic walk of Kippenross, the property of John Stirling, Esq. near the end of which is a plane tree, supposed to be the largest in Scotland, the circumference of the trunk in the smallest part being nearly twenty feet; where the brances separate fully twenty-seven feet, and close to the ground forty-two feet seven inches; the height of the tree is one hundred feet; and in June, 1860, it will have attained the age, it is said, of four hundred and fifty-eight years.

A few miles from the town is Sheriffmuir, on which a severe conflict took place in November, 1715, between the royal forces, under the Duke of Argyle, and the rebel army, commanded by the Earl of Mar. Here on the summit of a hill are some large stones enclosed by iron rails, said to be placed where the standard was erected. Prince Charles arrived at Dunblane on the 11th of September, 1745, on his way to the low country, and remained a night in a house of the laird of Balhaldie, now the residence of Mr. M'Aull. The room in which the prince held his levee, on the morning of his departure, is courteously shown to the enquiring visitor. Dunblane bestows the title of viscount on the Duke of Leeds. There was formerly a market held here, and numerous fairs, but they have all gone into disuse.

POST OFFICE, High-street, DUNBLANE, Margaret Dawson, Post Mistress.—Letters from EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, and the SOUTH, arrive every morning at eight o'clock, and night at twenty minutes past eleven; and are despatched at twenty minutes before five, and twenty minutes before seven in the evening.

Letters from PERTH and the NORTH arrive at five and twenty minutes past seven in the evening; and are despatched every morning at a quarter before eight, and night at five minutes past eleven.

Money Orders granted and paid from nine in the morning to six in the evening.

DUNKELD, CAPUTH, LITTLE DUNKELD AND BIRNAM.

DUNKELD is a small but interesting and handsome town, and burgh of barony, partly in the united parishes of Dunkeld, Dowally, and partly in that of Caputh; 57 miles N. N. W. from Edinburgh (by rail 60 miles), 24 E. from Kenmore, 15 N. N. W. from Perth, and 12 W. from Blairgowrie; delightfully situated in the bosom of an amphitheatre of hills, at the spot where the highlands and lowlands appear to meet, and where the Tay first escapes from its mountain fastnesses to the smiling land to which it contributes so much additional fertility and beauty. The town is of great antiquity, and was the capital of ancient Caledonia. The monastery of the Culdees is noticed so early as 729, and is recorded to have been built by Constantine, third king of the Picts. David I. in 1127, converted it into a bishopric. The first bishop of this see whose name appears prominently in history is the heroic William Sinclair, who assumed the mitre in 1312: he built the choir, which is still entire and converted into the parish church (which in 1818, at a cost of £6,000, was very elegantly fitted up); the other parts of the cathedral have been abandoned to the operations of time and the seasons, and have sunk into a state of dilapidation; in the early part of the sixteenth century the see of Dunkeld was honoured by no less distinguished an occupant than the learned Gavin Douglas, a younger son of the Earl of Angus. The situation of the cathedral, in the midst of a fine grove on the left bank of the Tay, sequestered from the gaze of the town, must highly interest the contemplative stranger; indeed the scenery which surrounds Dunkeld has long been the subject of admiration. Nature has been bountiful to this district, and her favours were duly appreciated and skilfully assisted by the late noble proprietor, the Duke of Athole, who conducted his operations and embellishments with such consummate taste as to produce one of the most beautiful and picturesque retreats that is to be found in all Scotland, and which has long been the resort, as it has been the delight of all tourists and visitors—accommodations for whom, and families, are furnished by two very extensive and superior hotels, respectively called the Duke of Athole's Arms Inn, and Fisher's Royal Hotel; the latter, in the occupation of Mr. Fisher, has received considerable additions and improvements; it comprises forty bed-rooms, and several elegant sitting-rooms, besides appropriate servants' apartments. The bridge of Tay, at this place, is a magnificent structure of seven arches, the total span of which is six hundred and eighty-five feet, width twenty-seven feet, water way four hundred and forty-six feet, and its greatest height fifty-seven feet. Its erection was commenced in 1805, and completed in 1809, at a cost of upwards of £30,000; £5,000 of which was contributed by government, and the remainder disbursed by the late public-spirited nobleman. The bridge was constructed chiefly on dry land, and the river afterwards turned to flow through its finely formed arches; a Mr. Brown was the architect. The view from this bridge is, in every direction, remarkably fine. Near the town is a seat of the noble family of Athole, the gardens belonging to which, the cascades, the extensive pleasure-grounds, and the lovely scenery, are most attractive objects; among these, Ossian's Hall, the rumbling bridge, and several falls of the river Bran, are pointed out to the visitor. In these grounds are two very fine trees called 'the mother larches,' being the first grown in Britain; they were planted in 1737, and are one hundred feet high; one of them measures fifteen feet in circumference, at three feet from the ground. For a more particular description of this interesting locality we may refer to a recently published work by Messrs. M'Lean & Son, of Dunkeld, entitled 'Dunkeld, its Straths and Glens.'

The manufacture of linen goods was at one time the staple of Dunkeld, but that branch has materially declined, and there is little business now transacted in it. Productive slate-quarries are worked by the Messrs. Harris, aad by Mr. Jack. There are branches of the three following respectable banking establishments settled here, namely, the Central Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland, and the Union Bank of Scotland. Dunkeld is a burgh of barony, and as such, governed by a baron-baillie, who is appointed by the Athole family. A justice of peace court sits once a month, and a sheriff small debt court once a quarter, for the recovery of sums not exceeding £8. 6s. 8d. For the education of youth there is an establishment called the Royal Grammar School, and one for females called the Duchess of Athole's School, £1,200 being given by Her Grace for its erection. The weekly market is held on Saturday, and the fairs 14th February, 5th April, and the 20th June.—should any of these fall on Saturday, Sunday or Monday, the fairs take place the following Tuesday; another is held on the second Tuesday in November.

LITTLE DUNKELD, contrary to its distinctive appellative, is an extensive parish, lying on the west or right bank of the Tay, opposite to Dunkeld above described. The village is situated at the south end of the bridge, which carries the road across to Dunkeld. The parish forms a kind of irregular triangle, and is disposed by nature into three districts; first the district of Murthly, extending from Kinclaven to the village of Inver; the surface of this district is beautifully varied, its soil fertile, and generally well enclosed and cultivated; it is adorned by Murthly House, the seat of the Stewarts of Grandtully, and by Birnam Hill rendered classical by Shakspere, and rising in rude magnificence from the edge of the river. The Perth and Dunkeld Railway terminates in the village of BIRNAM, which is becoming very populous; it is situated three quarters of a mile from Dunkeld in this portion of the parish. The Birnam Hotel, of which Mr. Anderson is the proprietor, is a building in the Saxon Gothic style, surrounded with fine pleasure grounds, and contains a public hall, perhaps one of the finest in the kingdom. The second district extends from Inver, along the banks of the Tay to Grandtully, a space of ten miles: here the fields are level, and the whole has the appearance of an almost continued series of beautiful gardens. The third division, which is separated from the second by a hilly tract of considerable elevation, is a valley of about nine miles in length: the soil if generally of a fertile clay or loam, grey freestone and slate. The mineral productions that have been hitherto discovered in the parish, are confined to lead ore and argillaceous earth. Little Dunkeld parish is traversed by the military road from Perth to Inverness

DUNNING, FORTEVIOT AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

DUNNING is rather an extensive parish, containing a neat village of its name—the latter 9 miles S.W. from Perth, and 5 E. from Auchterarder; situated near the centre of the district, on the banks of the Dunning water (a tributary of the Earn), half a mile north of the base of the Ochil range of hills, and about two miles from the river Earn. The village, which contains a number of good houses, is under the control of a baron baillie. The places of worship are the parish and Free churches, an United Presbyterian and Evangelical Union chapels. The steeple of the parish church is of very ancient date, and is supposed to be o Pictish origin. A branch of the Union Bank of Scotland is established in the village. The village was burnt to the ground by the Earl of Mar's army, on the retreat from Sheriffmuir to Perth. A thorn that was planted at that time, in the centre of the ruins, is still to be seen, and from its shape, size, and appearance it at once attracts the stranger's attention. It is recorded that at the conflagration of the village, only one house escaped (which is still standing), and that by an ingenious device on the part of its owner—a female, who, while the rest of the cottages were in flames, threw parcels of wet straw and refuse of flax on the fire within the house, which raised such a smoke round this particular dwelling, that believing it to be in a fair way of demolition, the soldiers did not molest it. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in May (old style), on the 20th June, and 24th October.

FORTEVIOT is a parish in the district of Strathearn, and the greater portion in the vale of Earn—the river of that name passing through it. The middle portion is beautifully wooded and enclosed, and is intersected by the May, which joins the Earn nearly opposite Dupplin Castle. The village of Forteviot, which is situated on the right bank of the last-named stream, is an ancient capital of the Pictish kingdom, but nothing now remains to mark a royal seat. At Bankhead, near Dupplin Castle, an ancient cross may be seen, and one also on the opposite height of Dromochy, both which are supposed to mark the approaches to Hally hill, where, in the time of Charles I., vestiges of a palace were in existence. It was on the heights here that the battle of Dupplin was fought. The river May, before mentioned, winds delightfully through the verdant knolls of the Ochils, and thence through the picturesque grounds of Invermay, flowing on and forming in its course beautiful falls, until it becomes lost for a time in the intricate course of the Hummel-Rummel, a cataract at Mackarcey Linn, that tumbles for more than 30ft., in a perpendicular fall, into a romantic glen, the property of A. H. M. Belshes, Esq., who has done much to improve by art the natural beauties of this charming locality. About 300 yards from the village is a station belonging to the Scottish Central Railway.

ERROL,

WITH THE PARISHES OF ABERNYTE, INCHTURE, KINNAIRD, LONGFORGAN, SAINT MADOES, FINDO GASK, AND FOWLIS EASTER.

ERROL, is a parish in the carse of Gowrie, five miles and a half in length and nearly three in breadth, stretching across the carse from the foot of the hill to the banks of the Tay. The soil is rich and fertile, and under the most productive tillage; it is also highly favourable to the growth of fruit trees. The country is intersected with small tracts of water called 'pows,' collected chiefly from the trenches opened for draining the grounds. As the tide and current in the Tay were making great encroachments, the proprietors of the land found it necessary to build strong walls to arrest their usurpation. It is recorded that this district receives its name of Errol, signifying the flight of a hawk, from the circumstance of the family of Hay, who, having fought gallantly under Luncartney, received for their services, from the king, a gift of as much land in the carse of Gowrie as a hawk flew over. Be this account correct or merely originating in traditionary legend, it is certain the noble family of Hay takes the title of Earl of Errol from the appellation of the parish; the small village named after it, is 10 miles E. from Perth, occupying a beautiful situation on a rising ground, embowered in trees, commanding a prospect of the Tay and the Carse almost as far east as Dundee. A rivulet flows past it to the Tay, and forms a small harbour at its mouth: and about a mile from the village is a station on the Dundee and Perth line of railway. The village is gas lighted. The parish church is a very handsome building on a commanding site; the tower may be seen at a considerable distance; there is also a substantial and capacious Free church, and two for United Presbyterians.

FORTINGAL

IS a parish in the district of Bredalbane. The village, a small one, is 84 N.W. miles from Edinburgh, 42 N.W. from Perth, 15½ N.N.E. from Killin, 5½ S.W. from Dull, and 5 W. from Kenmore, situated on the left bank of the river Lyon, about three miles from its junction with the Tay. The parish lies in the midst of the Grampians, and is only useful for sheep pasture. Including the abolished parish of Kilchonan, it extends thirty-seven miles in length by seventeen in breadth, occupying a large tract of Higland territory in the north-west part of the county. The district abounds in lakes, rivers, and woods; the chief of the former being Loch Rannoch, about eleven miles in length, whose banks are finely wooded. Not far from the southern bank of the lake are the barracks called Georgetown. In this district rises the Schehallion, one of the highest mountains in Scotland, where Dr. Maskelyne, astronomer royal, some years ago, made his observations on the powers of attraction. This parish is so wild and mountainous that, prior to the year 1745, the civil power could not reach it. It was the receptacle of the freebooters who laid the country under that species of contribution so well known by the name of 'black mail.' The inhabitants are now steady and industrious. Fairs are held in the village, April the 25th, August the 21st, and December the 6th.

KENMORE AND NEIGHBOURHOOD.

THE parish of KENMORE lies in the Highland district of Breadalbane, surrounding the large and beautiful lake Loch Tay, which is twenty-one miles in length, varying from one to two breadth. The waters of the lake, which seldom or never freeze, abound with salmon and other fish. The clean little village of Kenmore, with its kirk and its white cottages, occupy a lovely eminence at the north-east end of the loch, close by the point where it opens into a river, over which is thrown a handsome bridge. The village is 80 miles N.N.W. from Edinburgh, 40 N.W. from Perth, 24 W. from Dunkeld, 16 N.E. from Killin, and 5 E. from Fortingal. In the vale below the village are the park and castle of Taymouth, the magnificent seat of the Marquess of Breadalbane. The mansion contains a fine and valuable collection of portraits, by celebrated artists, and a choice selection of miscellaneous paintings, rendering the 'Breadalbane gallery', one of the best in Scotland. The house, some years since, was much enlarged, and improved by its noble owner, and it now ranks amongst the most elegant modern castellated mansions in Scotland. This spot is a favourite point in a tour to the Highlands, and hence is much visited in summer. The district comprises objects both sublime and beautiful: among the former is the majestic mountain, Ben Lawers, which rises, on the north-east side of the loch, to the height of 4,015 feet. Fairs are held on the first Tuesday in March, and the 2nd of November (both old style), and the 28th of June, the 26th of July, the 17th of September, and the 24th of December.

KILLIN, WITH THE VILLAGE OF CLIFTON.

KILLIN, a mountainous and extensive parish in the highland district of Breadalbane—the village, a small one, is 74 miles N.W. from Edinburgh, 40 N.N.W. from Stirling, 27 W. by N. from Crieff, 22½ N. from Callander, 16 S. W. from Kenmore, and 8 from Loch earnhead, occupying a delightful and picturesque situation at the west end of the celebrated Loch Tay, and near the confluence of the rivers Lochy and Dochart with the waters of the lake. On a small island, formed by two branches of the river, and much in the shape of a coffin, is the burial place of the M'Nab clan. On one of the trees of the island may be seen a branch, which severed from its parent stem by a storm in February, 1806, attached itself to a neighbouring tree, and is now growing with its branches downwards. A small eminence, in the neighbourhood of Killin, is pointed out as the place of sepulture of the famed highland hero Fingal. The village is noted for the picturesque beauty of its situation, and, like Kenmore, is a favourable point of tour of the central Highlands. Mrs. M'Tavish's commercial and family hotel affords every accommodation to visitors.

Besides Killin, there is another village in the western part of the parish, called CLIFTON. To view the scenery of this district to advantage, the traveller is advised to take the road on the south-east side of the lake; and in passing down its banks, it is worth while to stop a little at a woody glen, where the family of Breadalbane have built a grotto opposite to a cascade, which is very well deserving of attention. This is named the Fall of Acharn, and has two or three falls in its descent. The greatest, however, is that which is opposite to the hermitage, where it suddenly precipitates itself over a projecting rock two hundred and forty feet. The hills here are mostly green, and afford good pasturage.

Fairs are held on the third Tuesday in January, the 5th and 12th of May, the Friday before Doune first of November fair, and the first Tuesday in November (old style).

POST OFFICE, William Walker, Post Master.—Letters from all parts (except KENMORE) arrive from CRIEFF at half-past eight; and are despatched thereto at a quarter-past twelve at noon,

KINCARDINE, CULROSS, AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

KINCARDINE (or Kincardine-on-Forth) is a sea port town and burgh of barony, in the parish of Tullialan; 22 miles S. from Perth, 15 W. from North Queensferry, 10 W. from Dunfermline, 6 W. from Torryburn, and 5 E. from Alloa; situated in the southern detached part of the county, on the north bank of the Frith of Forth. At one period this place was called West Pans, from the salt works established in it, but these have longed ceased to exist. There are two banking establishments here—the one a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland, the other of the Commercial Bank of Scotland. About fifteen ship or part ship owners are settled in Kincardine; there is an old established rope, canvas and sail-cloth manufactory, and shipbuilding is carried on by Messrs. Duncan, Wright & Son. There is a commodious harbour and an excellent quay, which, together with the good anchorage ground in the Forth, render this haven an eligible refuge for vessels in distress; the harbour will admit vessels of from three hundred to four hundred tons burthen. The town is irregularly built; there are some good houses, but the streets are narrow, and, upon the whole, it is a place not of prepossessing appearance. The new church, erected some years ago, is a very handsome and ornamental structure; the other places of worship are a Free church and an United Presbyterian chapel. The old church remains standing in the burial ground, and exhibits an interesting ruin—the steeple, however, being perfect. The principal seat in the vicinity in Tullyallan Castle, from which an extensive view of the surrounding country is commanded. A fair is held in Kincardine on the last Friday in August.

CULROSS is an ancient town and representative burgh, in the parish of its name, four miles from Kincardine; situated partly on the acclivity of a hill rising from the Forth, the principal street running north from the shore. It formerly carried on an extensive traffic in salt and coal, and previous to the union between the two countries, one hundred and seventy foreign vessels have been at one time in the roads, this trade is now entirely lost. The Earl of Dundonald erected some very extensive works for extracting tar, naphtha, and volatile salt from coal; but the speculation proving unproductive it was abandoned, and the works allowed to go to ruin. The principal employment of the working class at the present time is weaving for the Glasgow houses. Culross was erected into a royal burgh by James VI, in 1588; it has a chief magistrate, two baillies, a treasurer, with eight merchant councillors, and six incorporated trades; the burgh is united with the towns of Stirling, Queensferry, Inverkeithing, and Dumfermline in returning one member to parliament.

The town and its vicinity possess many objects of antiquity. In 1278, a monastery was founded, on rising ground behind the town, by Malcolm, Thane of Fife; considerable remains of this structure are yet extant. On the north side was the abbey church, which had a steeple in the centre, the latter still entire, as is also a part of the church some years since repaired, and now used for public service by the parish. In a recess opposite the doorway is a monument to Sir George Bruce, in beautiful white marble, lying beside his lady; and along a low settle are arranged their seven children in kneeling posture. To the west of the town, on the banks of the Forth, is Castlehill, anciently called Dunnemart Castle, meaning, 'the castle near the sea;' it was the stronghold of the Macduffs, and according to tradition, was the horrible scene of the murder of Lady Macduff and her children, perpetrated by order of the ambitious and sanguinary Macbeth; the fabric is now a total ruin. Near the church is a school endowed by the late Patrick Geddes, Esq., for twenty children of both sexes. Fairs are held on the third Tuesday in July and the third Wednesday in November.

KIRKMICHAEL.

IS an extensive parish, in the south-eastern corner of the county, adjoining Aberdeenshire on tha north, and the county of Forfar on the east; it extends seventeen miles in length, by from six to seven in breadth, comprehending the whole Glenshee district, and part of that of Strathardie. On some of the hills of this district, tradition fixes the scene as that where many of the Fingalian exploits were performed. A military way from Coupar Angus to Fort George, proceeds through the northern part of the parish, by the Spittal of Glenshee. The southern quarter of the district is intersected by the Ardie, which is crossed by a stone bridge of two arches, and a good road passes along the left bank of the river. In this part stand the parish village and kirk, at a distance of 72 miles N. from Edinburgh, 29 N. from Perth, and 13 N.E. from Logierait. There is a handsome free church which will seat five hundred persons, and a constabulary force in the village.

MEIGLE.

IS a parish in the district of Strathmore—the village or small town—an ancient one, and the seat of a presbytery, is 61 miles N. from Edinburgh, 18 N. by E. from Perth, 13½ N. N. W. from Dundee, 9 S. S. W. from Kirriemuir, 7½ W. from Glammis, 5 N. from Coupar Angus, and 4 S. from Alyth; pleasantly situated on the bank of the Isla, about a mile from a railway station, on the Scottish North-Eastern line. There is also in course of construction a branch line from Meigle station to Alyth, which will pass close to Meigle village. The parish is four miles and a half in length and two in breadth, is fertile and well cultivated, and, besides the Isla, is watered by the Dean, which is the northern boundary of the district. There are some beautiful seats in this part of the county, particularly Belmont Castle, the mansion of Lord Wharncliffe, the gardens and fine plantations of which combine to render it the most delightful residence in all Strathmore. In one of the enclosures is pointed out a tumulus, where, it is said the murderous Macbeth was deprived of his usurped power and his life in his fatal encounter with Macduff. A number of stones and monuments, supposed to be of Pictish origin, are also to be seen in this vicinity, several crosses of a similar kind have been found at Temple Hall, the residence of Mr. Gellatly, and are now erected in his garden. In the churchyard of Meigle are some very old monuments, which, tradition asserts denote the grave of Queen Vanoria, the unfaithful wife of King Arthur; the figures, which, it it said, once delineated the history of Vanoria, are so defaced and dilapidated as to render all attempts at deciphering their meaning a fruitless task. About a mile north-east of the village, at the junction of the Isla and the Dean, are the remains of a Roman camp, called Caraen, or Caerden, and noticed by General Roy in his work on the Roman antiquities of Scotland. In the village is the Strathmore Inn, of which Mr. Colquhoun is the proprietor; he has gained considerale notoriety for his unparalleled strength, having gained the prize medal at the Glasgow Highland Gymnastic Club, in 1853; on one occasion he placed a piece of coal nearly 13cwt. in a cart without the assistance of any other person; the coal still remains in his possession. A cattle market is held on the first Monday in every month, and fairs on the last Wednesday in June, and on the last Wednesday in October.

METHVEN,

MONEDIE, REDGORTON, TIBBERMUIR, TRINITY GASK, AND ABERDALGIE.

METHVEN is a very neat village and parish—the former six miles west from Perth; situated on the high road to Crieff, from which it is distant eleven miles. It possesses a branch of the Royal Bank of Scotland, a subscription library, containing nearly 2,000 volumes, and a body of freemasons; there is likewise an agricultural society, who holds two meetings annually, which are very respectably attended. The Perth, Almond Valley, and Methven Railway affords communication with the principal parts of the kingdom. The ancient church of Methven was collegiate, being founded 1433, for a provost and seven prebendaries, by Walter Stuart, Earl of Athol, one of the youngest sons of Robert II. About a mile from the village is Methven Castle (the residence of William Smythe, Esq.), distinguished in Scottish history as the place where King Robert was defeated by the English army under the Earl of Pembroke, in 1306. In the parish is also Balgowan, the residence of William Thomson, Esq. But, perhaps, the most interesting object in the parish is the grave of the celebrated 'Bessy Bell and Mary Gray,' whose beauty and seclusion from the world are the subject of an admired Scottish melody. Fairs are held on the first Thursday in May and fourth Thursday in October.

The parish of MONEDIE is a small district, comprehending a square of about two miles, bounded by the parish of Auchtergaven on the north, and by that of Redgorton on the east and south. There are, properly speaking, no hills in the parish but only rising grounds which run northward and southward from the banks of the Shockie. Until lately Monedie was annexed to the parish of Logie Almond.

REDGORTON parish is about six miles in length by two in breadth, extending along the Tay and Almond; besides which rivers there is the Shockie stream, and several other rivulets, each propelling considerable machinery in the district through which the waters pass. It is bounded on the north by Auchtergaven and Kinclaven, on the east by Scone, on the south and south-west by Tibbermuir and Methven, and on the west by Monedie.

TIBBERMUIR (or Tippermuir) is a parish of about the same extent as Redgorton, and is a manufacturing district, having within it extensive bleachfields and print-works. The ancient castle of Huntingtower is in Tibbermuir, and is worthy of notice as being formerly the seat of the Gowrie family, and the place where James VI was some time confined, by the Earl of Gowrie and other conspirators, in the year 1582. Tibbermuir has given its name to the first battle that was fought between the Marquess of Montrose and the covenanters, though the conflict occurred more within the parish of Aberdalgie; in this sanguinary engagement the covenanting forces were totally routed.

TRINITY GASK is a parish in the lower part of Strathearn, and comprises the ancient parishes of Kinkel and Wester Gask. It extends several miles along the northern bank of the Earn. The whole of the parish is arable and well enclosed and planted.

ABERDALGIE, a parish, is washed on the south by the Earn, which here affords excellent fishing. The parish abounds in freestone, and much of the land is under plantation. Duplin Castle, a seat of the Earl of Kinnoul, is in the parish.

MUTHILL AND ARDOCH,
WITH THE VILLAGE OF BRACO.

MUTHILL is an extensive parish lying on the borders of the Highland district, on the right bank of the Earn—the village is 19 miles N. from Stirling, 16 W. from Perth, and 3 S. from Crieff; situate on the great military road from Dunblane to Inverness by Tummelbridge. About a mile to the westward stands Drummond Castle, the ancient seat of the noble family of Perth, now the residence of Lord Willoughby D'Eresby; it is finely seated on a rock at the head of the vale of Strathearn, and attracts the attention and admiration of every stranger from the beautiful prospect it commands. There is a church in ruins, said to have been built in 1419, the tower appears to be of an earlier date, and is doubtless of Pictish origin. A church was erected in 1828. In the churchyard a very fine monument was lately erected to the Rev. William Halley, the first Presbyterian minister of the parish; a Free church and an Episcopal chapel are the other places of worship, and connected with the churches are schools and a joint library. There is also a reading room and library—established by Lady Willoughby D'Eresby. The Crieff Junction Railway passes through the parish, and has a station here. A portion of the industrious classes are employed in weaving, for the large manufacturing houses.

The principal object of interest in the parish, particularly to the antiquary, are two Roman camps; one at Strageath—the other at ARDOCH, a parish constituted in 1857, six miles from Muthill; the latter being considered one of the most perfect and interesting in Britain. The area of this camp is an oblong of one hundred and forty yards by one hundred and twenty-five, within the lines; the 'general's quarter,' which is a regular square of twenty yards each side, rises above the level of the camp, and contains the foundation of a house ten yards by seven. There are two other encampments adjoining, which have a communication with each other. Many years ago, various interesting relics were brought to light from beneath these ancient fortifications, such as Roman spears, helmets, fragments of bridles, and several other articles: these lay at the House of Ardoch for a considerable period; but were all carried off by some soldiers in the Duke of Argyle's army, after the battle of Sheriffmuir in 1715, and could never be recovered.

Trinity College, GLENALMOND, on the banks of the Almond, is ten miles from Perth, and four miles from the Perth, Almond, and Methven Railway), was projected in the year 1841, and opened in the year 1847. It was meant to assume the double purpose of promoting a proper collegiate training for the divinity students of the Scottish Episcopal church; and of establishing in Scotland a large public school, after the general model of the older English endowments. Both departments have now been in full operation for several years. The site on which the college stands was presented by George Patton, Esq., of the Cairnies. The funds for the buildings, which have already cost upwards of £50,000, were raised by a general subscription throughout England and Scotland. Among the most munificent benefactors were the Duke of Buccleuch, the late Sir John Gladstone, Bart., the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, and the Right Rev. Charles Wordsworth, the first warden of the college. The chapel, a building in the decorated style of Gothic architecture, 136 feet long by 52 feet wide, with a height of 70 feet, was erected at a cost of more than £8,000, at the sole expense of the Right Rev. C. Wordsworth. The council consists of eighteen members; namely, the seven Scotch bishops, with three Presbyters, and the following eight laymen:—the Duke of Buccleuch, the Earl of Home, the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, M.P. Sir A. Edmonstone, Bart., Sir P. M. Threipland, Bart. Sir M. R. Shaw Stewart, Bart., M.P., W. Smythe, Esq., of Methven, and W. P. Dundas, Esq. The resident society consists of a warden, a sub-warden, a tutor in theology, and four other masters, who are assisted by visiting masters for special purposes.

BRACO is a village in the parish of Ardoch, it contains a Free church and a subscription school.

PERTH,

WITH THE PARISH OF KINNOUL AND NEIGHBOURHOODS.

PERTH, an ancient and elegant city, royal burgh, seat of a synod and presbytery, and capital of the county to which it gives name, is 43 miles N. from Edinburgh, 61 N. E. from Glasgow, 22 S. W. from Dundee, and 15 S. from Dunkeld. The city is situated at the opening of an extensive plain, nearly surrounded by picturesque hills, having in the distance a view of the sublime amphitheatre of the Grampians; and bounded on the north and south by two beautiful meadows, called the North and South Inches, the former containing one hundred acres, the latter seventy-two; both ornamented with noble trees, and watered by the Tay, one of the finest rivers in the kingdom: these Inches are for the use and recreation of the inhabitants. It is recorded that when Agricola's army saw this delightful plain and superb river, they exclaimed, as with one voice, Ecce Tiber! Ecce Campus Martius!—'Behold the Tiber! Behold the field of Mars!' Agricola pitched his camp in the middle of that field, on the spot where the city now stands. Till of late years the traces of a fortification, called Cromwell's Fort, were visible on the South Inch, but are now entirely obliterated, and elegant new buildings have from time to time been erected on part of the space it occupied. Perth for a long period held the rank of capital of Scotland, was the residence of its kings and nobles, and the seat of its parliaments. It appears this city once bore the name of St. John. At the early period when the Scots king succeeded to the Pictish throne, the church and bridge of Perth are supposed to have been consecrated to St. John the Baptist, as the tutelary saint of that town—and consequently it progressively obtained the name of St. John's Town, but was not recognised by that name in any of the public documents of the period. Fordun, in his history, remarks that he had found in some ancient writs that the town of St. John, now called Perth, was priorily Bertha, the contraction being Berth or Bert; and as the letters B and P are used in the Gaelic language indiscriminately, it may naturally be presumed that the Highlanders changed the pronunciation of it to Perth; and from this circumstance, it is very probable, the present name of the place was derived—indeed, at the present time, the word Perth is pronounced by the Highlanders Peirt or Peart.

The approach to Perth by the Edinburgh road is strikingly picturesque, and the descent to the South Inch terminates in a majestic avenue of trees, extending to the town. At the termination of a second avenue stands the extensive general prison for Scotland, built by government, in 1812, for the reception of prisoners of war. It was wholly re-built and remodelled in 1842, it was then occupied as a criminal prison, and more extensive buildings erected for the purpose. The city itself is large and well built; the streets are long and spacious, well paved and gas-lighted. At the east end of Marshall-place, and forming the extreme south-eastern angle of the city, stands a fine architectectural ornament, the new water reservoir, designed by the learned and accomplished Dr. Anderson, rector of the Academy, and erected under his immediate superintendence: he also devised the scheme for the supply of pure water. In all wells sunk within or near the town the water was strongly impregnated with salts, and consequently ill adapted for culinary purposes or cleanliness—the saline fluid flowing in much faster from the neighbouring high grounds than the soft water from the river. To obviate this, Dr. Anderson devised the plan of excavating a filtering bed, three hundred feet long, in the gravel, in the upper end of Friartown island, which, having a branch of the river flowing on either side, secretes only the water of the Tay, and produces an unlimited quantity of this indespensable element—pure, soft and limpid at all times and seasons; this is conveyed to the reservoir by means of a suction pipe, of great power, below the bed of the principal branch of the river, and thrown up into the tank by two beautiful steam engines, each of ten horses' power. The project has been crowned with such complete success that works upon the same principle are carried into effect in Berlin and Paris. The expense of this noble work is defrayed by an assessment on real rents above a certain amount, while the poor are supplied gratis. The public baths were erected by subscription in 1816, at a cost of £1,300, and every description of bath may be used at a very low charge. Opposite the North Inch, and fronting the Tay, is an elegant row of houses called Rose terrace; in the centre are erected the Public Seminaries (noticed hereafter). At the south end of Rose-terrace is a handsome range of houses forming a crescent. The range of villas on St. Leonard's bank, skirting the western boundary of the South Inch, at the summit of a gentle elevation, is particularly striking. In addition to these, the whole of the tasteful erections in King-street and King's-place, Kinnoul-street, Athol-street, Charlotte-place, and Barossa-place, have arisen within thirty-five years. Adjoining the North Inch is a bridge which crosses the Tay; this fine structure, elegant, though unadorned, is built in a most substantial manner, but its narrowness admits of a foot path one one side only. Immediately adjoining the bridge is the village of Bridge-End, leading to Kinnoul Hill, whose summit at the distance of a mile and half, can be most agreeably ascended by Montague-walk, winding through a wood about one-half the distance; the precipice of Kinnoul is above six hundred feet perpendicular, and affords an enchanting prospect. The noble river that flows along the base of this towering cliff, the hills and more concentrated objects in the foreground, and the grandeur of the mountainous perspective, present a panorama that is rarely excelled. Near the eastern declivity of this remarkable cliff stands the beautiful Castle of Kinfauns, in the centre of the delightful demesne of the same name, so richly embellished by the late Lord Gray. On the eastern bank of the river, about two miles from Perth, stands Scone Palace: the original edifice of such historical notoriety, has been replaced by a magnificent pile of building; it is surrounded by extensive pleasure grounds, highly embellished by wood and water. At a short distance from the palace is the chapel, also re-built; it is environed by majestic trees, which gives it an air of pleasing solemnity. Before the reign of King James, the coronation of the kings of Scotland was solemnised in the palace of Scone. The Earl of Mansfield is hereditary keeper of this palace, and proprietor of the spacious park and grounds that surround it. The noble family reside here, and hold great state for nearly six months in the year. It is visited by great numbers of strangers and tourists, and access can be obtained at all times, by a written order (which is readily granted), on application to the noble Earl's agent Mr. Condie, Blackfriars House, Perth.

The public buildings in Perth, especially those of late erection, display much taste and spirit. The most prominent is the county rooms. This structure, completed after a design by Mr. Smirke, is situated at the extreme end of South-street, on the banks of the Tay, and forms a noble object when viewed from the opposite side of the river. The front, which faces the water, is embellished by an elegant portico in the centre, and twelve massive fluted columns, which support a beautiful pediment. From the entrance hall a passage leads off to the county hall, which is a noble room, 68 by 40 feet, and occupies the south wing; the centre contains the spacious justiciary hall, of semicircular form, and a gallery which will hold 1,000 persons. The remainder of the building, on the same floor, includes the sheriff's court and room, his clerk's office, and an arched fire-proof room where the records of the town are deposited; above is a capacious ball and card room, &c. Directly in the rear of this edifice the new gaol is erected, divided into two prisons —the northern side for felons, and the other for debtors. From the gaoler's house, fronting the interior of the entrance gate, a subterraneous passage leads to the prisoner's bar in the justice hall. Nearly £30,000 was expended in the erection of these buildings. The city hall, at the west end of Saint John's Church, erected by the town council, is one of the most capacious public rooms in Scotland—seating 1,800 persons. It is open for public meetings upon the payment of moderate fees.

Manufactures, &c.—There are several manufactories for hosiery and various fabrics of cotton and linen. Brewing, tanning, iron founding, and rope and sail making are other branches of industry and skill, whilst the coal, corn and timber trades employ aggregately a considerable capital. The city possesses extensive railway communication, there being no less than six lines—viz., the Scottish Central, the Scottish North-Eastern, the Dundee, Perth and Aberdeen, the Edinburgh, Perth and Dundee, the Perth Almond Valley and Methven, and the Perth and Dunkeld; the whole have one general terminus. There are eight banking establishments settled in Perth, exclusive of one for savings. The Central Bank of Scotland and the Bank of Scotland both occupy very ornamental buildings in Saint John-street. The hotels here are of a highly respectable character; the 'Salutation,' in South-street; the 'Temperance,' in Saint John-street; the 'King's Arms,' in High-street; the 'Exchange,' in George-street; and 'People's British' (first house from the railway terminus), are all comfortable and well conducted. Vessels of 200 tons burthen, owing to skilful dredging, can now deliver and receive carriages at the harbour; and steamboats pass regularly between Perth and Dundee. The number of vessels belonging to the port is about 58; the total burthen, perhaps, between 6,000 and 7,000 tons.

The Government of the city is vested in a lord provost (who is also a sheriff and coroner), four baillies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and nineteen councillors; the council thus consists of twenty-six members—all of whom (with the exception of the dean of guild) are, since the passing of the Burgh Reform Bill, in 1832, elected by the suffrages of the £10 constituency of the four elective wards. The dean of guild is a member of council ex-officio, and is chosen by the guild in corporation; the lord provost and magistrates are elected by the councillors, and returned from amongst themselves. The public officers of the municipality are two city clerks, a procurator fiscal, and a city chamberlain. The town court sits every Tuesday, and the council meets on the first Monday in every month. A sheriff's court is held every Wednesday and Friday during session; and two courts, at least, in each vacation. The police of the city is under the charge of a superintendent; and the quiet and good order of the town is materially promoted by the power the magistrates have of summary punishment for petty offences. The expense of this establishment is defrayed from the collection and sale of the public manure, and 5 per cent. chargeable on all rents above £3 per annum. Perth was constituted a royal burgh, with a confirmation of all its former privileges, in the year 1210, by William the Lion. James VI. accepted the municipal office of provost of the city, and partook, at the Cross, of the festivities which were prepared for that extraordinary occasion.

Edifices for Religion.—The churches in Perth, with some few exceptions, do not display any striking external beauties. Saint John's church is a very ancient structure, and supposed to be one of the first churches built of stone in this country; it was originally erected in the form of a cross, and called the Kirk of the Holy Cross of Saint John's Town. Although it has been almost entirely re-modelled by alterations at different periods, yet enough of the ancient part remains to testify that it once was a very fine edifice. Some extensive repairs have greatly improved its exterior appearance in later times. On the outside of the tower are affixed a set of musical bells, covered by a kind of portico, and a singularly looking spire surmounts the whole. The great reformer, Knox, thundered forth his declamations from the venerable old pile when denouncing the corruptions of the establishment. At the extremity of High-street, in Methven-street, stands Saint Paul's church, a more modern and not inelegant structure of stone, with a steeple surmounted by a spire. Saint Leonard's church, a very handsome structure, designed by Mr. Mackenzie, a local architect, was erected in King-street, in 1835—the expense defrayed by joint-stock shares and private subscriptions; it is incorporated with the establishment. The Episcopal or English church, is in Princes-street; it is small, but the interior is neat, and furnished with an excellent organ. St. Ninian's Cathedral, in Athole-street (also episcopal), was built in 1850, it is in the Scotch middle-pointed style of architecture; only a part of the proposed building is erected, but when completed it will have two towers, and be an ornament to the city. The Free Church have numerous edifices, as have also the different bodies of Presbyterian dissenters; and there is also a Gaelic church. The Baptists have a commodious chapel in South-street and the Roman Catholics a large one in Melville-street; the latter has a fine organ.

The city of Perth contains several charitable and well-supported institutions for the sick and destitute, among these are the County and City Infirmary, the Lunatic Asylum, the Perth Dispensary, a Society for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, the Destitute Sick Society, &c.; and several male and female schools for the education of poor children, all of which are conducted on the most liberal and enlightened principles. The Infirmary is a commanding structure, situated in the County-place: the first stone was laid by Lord Kinnaird, in 1836; the late Marquess of Breadalbane, and Dr. Brown, of Perth, left liberal bequests towards this institution, which donations have been augmented by one from the present Marquess of Breadalbane, of £400; adjoining the Infirmary is the Dispensary. The Lunatic Asylum building is situated on an eminence of considerable elevation, on the north-west side of the hill of Kinnoul; the order of architecture is in the Grecian Doric—it was originally constructed to contain one hundred patients, the funds for its erection being left by a Mr. Murray, a native of Perth. The accommodation in this asylum is so superior—the management so efficient—the mode of treatment and discipline of the patients so highly approved —and the success attending the exertions of the superintendent, the matron, and the physicians, so strikingly apparent—that the applications for admission, from all parts of the country, became so numerous and urgent, that it was considered necessary, in 1834, to make very extensive additions, on the same plan with the original portion of the work. Some years ago the institution was incorporated by royal charter, under the title of 'James Murray's Royal Lunatic Asylum.' The munificent bequest of the benevolent donor had been sufficient for all the erections, and a considerable sum still remained as an endowment. On the 9th of May, 1837, a large portion of this magnificent structure was accidentally destroyed by fire; it has been wholly re-built.

Many valuable institutions for literary pursuits and the encouragement of the fine arts are most respectably supported. The Antiquarian Museum possesses a considerable collection of valuable coins, medals, and manuscripts, besides a great variety of natural curiosities, amongst which is a cabinet of minerals, containing upwards of twelve hundred choice specimens, tastefully and scientifically arranged. In the centre of Rose-terrace are erected the 'Public Seminaries,' of fine stone, embellished with noble pillars. This institution is established on the most liberal principles; the course of education is completed in two annual sessions of ten months each, the session commencing in October and ending in July; the masters comprehend a rector for mathematics and the higher branches of education, and his assistant; a master for the modern languages, one for drawing and painting, and another for practical arithmetic and accounts. There is in course of erection in Methven-street, a building for educational purposes, called the 'Sharp Institute,' for which purpose the late John Sharp, a native of he city, bequeathed to trustees upwards of £12,000. The Grammar School has also a rector, and his assistant; the fees of attendance paid by the students are very moderate. Amongst the other educational establishments is the Perth Collegiate School, established for the purpose of bringing within the reach of the middle classes an education of the highest and best character, and to prepare them for the universities and mercantile pursuits. Exhibitions of the value of ten and twenty pounds are awarded to boys of promising talent —the head master is the Rev. E. L. Bleukinsopp. A beautiful structure has been erected near the bridge, which forms a handsome termination to George-street; it is dedicated to the memory of the late Thomas Marshall, Esq., of Glenalmond, formerly lord provost; and is a monument evincing esteem for departed worth. The form of this edifice is circular, ornamented with an elegant Ionic portico; the body of the building is surmounted by a dome, and the whole is imitative of the Pantheon at Rome; in the interior are halls for the public library, and for the museum of the Literary and Antiquarian Society of Perth: this structure was raised by private subscription. The Freemasons' Hall is a neat and not inelegant building, in the Parliament-close, High-street; it contains a handsome spacious room, which is principally used as an auction-mart for respectable sales; it was built on the site of the old Parliament House, in the year 1818, and is the property of the Royal Arch Lodge of Freemasons. On the Inches many of the citizens ardently engage in athletic sports and exercises, especially cricket, football, and the national game of golf; the Royal Perth Golfing Society includes in its roll of members a great many of the nobility and gentry. The barracks erected in 1795, at the west end of Athole-street, form a handsome building, originally intended to accommodate two hundred cavalry, but lately converted to the use of infantry; they will contain a full regiment. There is in course of erection by the authorities of the city a workhouse, an extensive pile of buildings, at a cost of £8,000.

The weekly market-day is Friday: the fairs, since the year 1822, have been altered by the magistrates and town council, on account of the general inconvenience resulting from the days formerly appointed falling on the same days, or at the same time, with the fairs of Falkirk and other places; they are now therefore held on the first Fridays in March, April, July and September, on the third Friday in October, the second Friday in December, and a sheep and wool fair the first Tuesday after Inverness wool fair; a cattle market is likewise held on the North Inch, on every Friday, from the third occurrence of that day in December, to the middle of June; and a horse market takes place on the first Friday in May.

KINNOUL parish lies with its western extremity to the Tay, opposite Perth, and, extending from thence in a most irregular manner for nearly four miles, has a general breadth of one mile. The surface is hilly, but romantic and exceedingly beautiful, being covered to a great extent with fine plantations, and having many gentlemen's seats. The hill of Kinnoul is one of the very finest objects in Great Britain. At the east end of the bridge which crosses the Tay from Perth, a large suburb has arisen called Kinnoul or Bridgend, which is a burgh of barony, under the Earl of Kinnoul, and is entitled to hold a weekly market, and four annual fairs. The ancient church of the parish was long a rectory, in the proprietary of the monastery of Cambuskenneth, and was dedicated to St. Constantine. The modern church is a neat edifice, built on a bank overhanging the Tay, south of the village. Near here once stood the old castle of Kinnoul. Kinnoul has given the title of earl to a branch of the family of Hay of Errol, the first of the title being ennobled in 1627, as Lord Hay of Kinfauns, and elevated to the earldom in 1633, as Earl of Kinnoul, Viscount Dupplin.

PITLOCHRY IN MOULIN AND LOGIERAIT.

WITH THE VILLAGE OF BALLINLUIG.

PITLOCHRY is a thriving village, in the parish of Moulin, 13 miles N.W. from Dunkeld, and about five from Logierait; situated on the banks of the Tummel, and surrounded on all sides by some of the most beautiful and varied scenery found in the highlands of Perthshire. The trade of the village is mainly confined to that of a domestic and retail character—except that the distillation of whisky is carried on somewhat extensively in the village and neighbourhood. The place, too, is of sufficient importance to encourage the establishment of several respectable fire and life agency offices, and three wealthy banking concerns—branches, respectively, of the Central Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland, and the Union Bank of Scotland; and there is, besides, a Savings' Bank. A justice of peace court sits here once in every third month, and three fairs are held annually—namely, on the Saturday before Amulree in May; on the Friday after Falkirk tryst, in August, for lambs, and on the third Wednesday in October (old style).

MOULIN is a large parish in the Highlands, extending towards Athole. It is intersected by the Briarachan and the Fernet, which unite within the district; and there are several lochs well stocked with trout, particularly lake Broom. The greater part of the parish is mountainous, but the vales of the streams are exceedingly beautiful. The village, which is very small, is five miles distant from Logierait; near it stand the ruins of the old castle of Moulin. In this parish is the pass of Killiecrankie, noted for the battle fought there in July, 1689, between King William's troops, commanded by General Mackay, and a body of highlanders under the Viscount of Dundee. There is a fair held at Moulin annually on the first Tuesday in March.

LOGIERAIT is a parish in the northern part of the county—the village is 8 miles N. from Dunkeld, and the like distance east from Aberfeldy. It is noted for the distillation of whisky, in which branch there are several establishments in the village and its neighbourhood. The principal part of the parish lies on the point of land formed by the junction of the Tay and the Tummel, extending along the banks of each seven miles. Not far from the church is an eminence, which commands a prospect of the greater part of the parish, which, including the windings of the rivers, the vales and pastures, with the woodlands, in some places extending to the rivers' banks, and the distant mountains, form together one of the richest landscapes that can be imagined. A chain boat commenced crossing the Tay at Logierait in August, 1824, for the accommodation of both foot and horse passengers. A coach and four may go into this conveyance without taking the horses from the carriage. It was at Logierait that Prince Charles kept his prisoners after the battle of Prestonpans.
